FORECAST HEAT WILL CONTINUE

Second Storm Hits Shelby as Relief Fails To Hold Up In Mansfield Area.

Although more showers last night brought temporary relief from the heat in the Mansfield area, the heat wave is not broken and readings of 90 degrees or more are in prospect for the week-end, the weatherman said today.

For the second consecutive day Shelby was struck by a heavy storm late Thursday, but no property damage was reported. Rain of near cloudburst proportions fell in the city about 7:30 p. m., while Mansfield received only a light shower. A wind and electrical storm caused heavy damage to communication lines and trees in the Shelby area Wednesday afternoon.

Temperatures moderated slightly in the Mansfield area yesterday and this morning, but the excessive humidity made the 88-degree reading yesterday as uncomfortable as the above-90 temperatures several days ago.

The reading at 10 a. m. today was 78 and at noon it was 83. Average for the past 24 hours was 76.5, still four degrees above normal.

At least five more deaths attributed to the heat were reported today in Ohio. Three men died of heat exhaustion at Toledo, another in Cincinnati, and a four-months-old child succumbed in Columbus.

Top readings in the state yesterday included 93 at Cincinnati, 90 at Cleveland, 88 at Toledo, Dayton and Springfield, and 86 at Columbus. The temperature was 90 or more at a number of points in the middlewest and as far west as the Rocky mountains, indicating that no immediate let-up in the scorching heat is in sight.

Gladioli Begin to Take Over Garden Spotlight

Fragile Flowers Give Added Brilliance to Landscape; One Mansfielder Cultivates 30,000 Bulbs.

By ESTHER SMITH

This is the gladiolus season. Hundreds of Mansfielders are watching their gardens and flower beds as the stately stalks burst into colorful bloom among the sword shaped leaves from which the flowers take their name.

And the pronunciation of that name may have caused a few arguments among flower-raisers in the city, but J. H. Dir, 62 Prospect street, who has been growing the plants for eight years and now has 30,000 bulbs under cultivation, says it doesn't make much difference whether you say "glad-eye-o-lus" or "gladi-oh-lus."

(Webster's dictionary agrees with Dir, too, making only the distinction that the first pronunciation is the only correct one for the whole genus.)

The gladioli business started as a hobby for Dir. His garden was filled with flowers of many varieties until he decided to specialize in gladioli.

Asked why he chose gladioli, Dir said, "I just liked them I guess, and got into different varieties until I had quite a collection." He now has 300 varieties, one or more believed to be exclusive with him in this area.

He was playing with other youngsters in the barn when the accident occurred, witnesses said.

According to the attending physician he suffered internal hemorrhages and a possible crushed liver.

Seek Special Election for $280,000 Airport Bond Issue

After hearing Richard Schram of the U. S. department of commerce explain the need for a new airport, representatives of Mansfield civic organizations voted last night to urge city council to authorize a special election on a $280,000 bond issue for airport improvements.

Following the unanimous vote, Dr. L. D. Bonar, chairman of the C. of C. aviation committee who presided at the meeting, appointed an 11-man committee to study ways of "selling" the idea to Mansfielders and to urge city council to authorize the election.

Schram, who has been working with J. R. "Bud" Harrington on the pilot's training school at Mansfield airport, said that the Civilian Polits' Training Program was started because government officials realized that a new commercial product will be needed after the present war is ended.

Schram said that the automobile industry, then new, helped greatly to lift the United States from a depression after the last war. However, he said, the auto industry has so nearly reached the saturation point in the number of sales it can make that it could not possibly -sesdep ae,w-sosi esss e tsrsi a sueis sion again.

40,000 Gestapo Agents Sent To Jugoslavia, German Trpops Attacked.

SIEGE STATE DECLARED

Reports Say 80,000 Serbians Have Been 'Exterminated' For Anti-Axis Acts.

(By United Press)

Reports of serious disorders, sabotage and guerrilla activity in the German and Italian-occupied countries of Norway, Jugoslavia, Greece and Rumania came today from various European capitals.

To these and other Axis-conquered nations, Great Britain has been directing her "V-for-victory" war of nerves.

Radio Moscow, heard by the United Press listening post in New York, reported that Germany had been forced to send 40,000 Gestapo agents to Jugoslavia where, is said, guerrilla bands have attacked Nazi troops, demolished bridges and highways and set fire to munitions stores.

Quoting the newspaper Pravda, Radio Moscow reported that 80,000 Serbians have been "exterminated" for anti-German activities in the three months Jugoslavia has been occupied by Axis forces.

Stockholm reported that a state of siege had been declared at Aalesund, on the west coast of Norway, as the result of sabotage and big anti-German demonstrations.

A German official news agency dispatch from Belgrade reported that 90 "Communists" had been executed in the Banat region of northeastern Jugoslavia for sabotage. Several days ago more than 100 Communists and Jews" were shot for sabotage in the Belgrade region. Hungarian dispatches had reported.

A United Press Ankara dispatch quoted diplomatic sources that the Germans had sent 25,000 more troops to Jugoslavia because of continued guerilla activity.

Another Ankara dispatch quoted travelers from Greece that there were between eight and 10 deaths a day in Athens from starvation

REBUFFED

Mexico Rejects With Stern Rebuke Nazi Protest.

MEXICO CITY —(AP)— Mexico, rejecting with a stern rebuke a German government request she protest President Roosevelt's black-list of pro-Axis firms here, provided tangible evidence today of her intention to co-operate with the United States in solving mutual problems created by the European war.

Mexico told Germany she regarded the request as not only imperious but threatening, and declared she would brook no interference in the formulation of her national policies.

She took exception particularly to the German assertion that "resigned acceptance" of Washington's anti-Axis measures could not fail to influence the attitude of the Berlin government in renewing commercial relations with Mexico after the war.

Rejection of the German request constituted the second rebuff Mexico has delivered to the Reich government within four months. In April President Manuel Avila Camacho's administration rejected a protest against expropriation of German ships in Mexican ports.

5,094,000 Miss This Wedding

AUSTIN, Tex.—(U.P.)—Pretty Molly O'Daniel, 19, daughter of Gov. and Sen.-Elect W. Lee O'Daniel, was married last night to wealthy Jack D. Wrather, jr., 23, but only 6,000 of the 6,000,000 guests her father had invited came to the wedding.

O'Daniel, whose secret of political success was a hill-billy band, regarded the wedding as the "climax" to his tenure of the governor's mansion, and invited every citizen of Texas to attend.

Only a few persons were invited to witness the ceremony. The 6,000 invited by radio stood on the lawn and heard the ceremony.

CONGRESS LAGS ON EXTENSION OF ARMY DRAFT

Reported Far From Decision as Army's Deadline For Urgent Action Passes.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Senator Hill (D. Ala.) said today that sponsors had agreed to compromise army service extension legislation to provide a maximum of 2 years of service for citizen soldiers.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Congress, immersed in argument and still far from a decision, today passed the army high command's urgent deadline for action on legislation extending the service of selectees, reservists and national guardsmen.

In the senate, where debate was in its third day, Senators Clark (D-Mo) and Vandenberg (R-Mich) kept up the attacks of a vocal opposition group by charging that to pass the bill would be to make the men in uniform liable to military service "for life."

Administration leaders, however, manifested unshaken confidence that they commanded ample votes for a two-to-one victory on the final showdown which they hoped for some time next week.

The house has yet to take up the measure and, while leaders there were equally confident, some others predicted it would find a rough road. Several representatives said they thought changes might even be made, necessitating a joint house-senate conference committee to work out a final compromise.

The situation, it was generally agreed, made it certain that final disposition of the legislation would be delayed well beyond the Aug. 1 deadline fixed by General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff.

BOALS NAMED CITY TRAFFIC COMMISSIONER

Squad Sworn In as Mayor Makes 5th Appointment To Fill Vacancy.

TRAINING SCHEDULED

Plan Outlined For Spotting and Cleaning Up of Dangerous Areas.

Patrolman Frend C. Boals, today was named city traffic commissioner and Mansfield's new traffic division of the police department was sworn into service.

Mayor William J. Locke administered the oath after naming Arthur J. Conrady, Cook road, as the fifth man on the squad to fill the post refused by a former appointee.

In addition to the five men appointed for traffic work, Police Chief Meade K. Bates announced that two veteran traffic policemen, Clare W. Kyler and Howard L. Schuck, will assist in traffic maintenance.

Boals announced that he would start training his squad immediately and that with the end of the training period the traffic men would maintain a traffic program based on three E's—engineering, education and enforcement.

Chief Bates said that the new policemen would work inside for at least two weeks, helping with the registration of bicycle license and other office work. The state law holds that a traffic policeman must be in uniform or properly identified to arrest persons for traffic violations. Bates said that because the squad's uniforms are not expected to arrive before August 15 the men would be unable to do traffic work outside except in a student capacity.

Boals has been active in traffic and safety control in Mansfield for almost 15 years. After serving as a mounted police officer for several years for the Richland county auto club and the city, he was appointed in 1931 as a city policeman. His permanent appointment came on Sept. 15, 1933.

The new traffic commissioner's most noticeable contribution to the city's traffic safety has been his "Safetytown," a summer playground school to teach children of pre-school age traffic dangers. Several cities have already adopted his "Safetytown" plan.

In addition to the traffic

ALL-TIME HIGH

Bank Clearings Hit 10 Million In Mansfield During July.

Booming industrial and retail activities in Mansfield last month pushed the city's bank clearings up to an all-time high of $10,940,327 for July, $400,000 ahead of the previous record set in October, 1929, Dale Kaylor, secretary of the Clearing House association, said today.

Mansfield banks last month handled nearly 40 per cent more money than in July last year. Clearings were $602,000 ahead of June this year which was the second best month on record in the city.

Clearings for the first seven months of the year totaled $67,783,692, a gain of $14,000,000 over the corresponding months of 1940, the Clearing House report showed.

Wants Control Of Rubber and Tin Production

British Concerned Since Move Would Put Nippon Within 400 Miles of Singapore; Chinese, Russians Keep Joint Watch on Siberia.

BULLETIN

TOKYO—(UP)—The Domei news agency said today that Japanese diplomats arriving from Moscow had reported heavy Russian troop movements along the trans-Siberian railroad, towards the western front and towards the far eastern sector.

(By Associated Press)

Japan's high-pressure march to the south took another big stride today with reported demands on Thailand (Siam) for military bases and control of that country's rubber, rice and tin production.

Authoritative quarters in London, the source of this report, said Japan in exchange had offered to restore the province of Laos and the ancient city of Angkor, both in Japanese-dominated French Indo-China.

British concern was pointed by the fact that Japanese occupation of bases in Thailand would put them within 400 miles striking distance of Britain's great fortress of Singapore and also poise a direct threat to British-ruled Burma and even India, which lies across the Bay of Bengal.

Coinciding with the report, the London air ministry announced that the Royal Air Force in Burma has been strengthened by the construction of airdromes "for both offensive and defensive actions."

Strong enforcements were said to be arriving in Burma, including numbers of American-made bombers.

Meanwhile, dispatches from Shanghai said Chinese Communist and Russian officers had already held staff conferences to plan joint military action in the event Japan strikes at Siberia.

Shanghai reports said Japan was still pouring war supplies into Manchukuo, which borders Siberia, and that 14,000 troops were moved recently, including a medical regiment.

In Tokyo, Japanese Finance Minister Mastsune Ogura insisted that Japan "has no intention of picking a quarrel with the United States and Britain," but in the same comment he declared that Japan must push ahead with its program in China and east Asia.

Ogura disclosed that the "China affair"—the 4-year-old war—has already cost Japan 25 billion yen, or about $6,000,000,000.

While Japan continued to pour troops into southern Indo-China, her finance ministry announced an agreement with Thailand whereby Japan gained a credit of 10,000,000 bahts (the baht is about 36 cents) for purchases in Thailand. Observers said this indicated Japan had been embarrassed financially by British-American freezing of her funds.

CLAIM GERMAN DRIVE STALLED

London Reports Invasion Army Near Point of Exhaustion on 2,000-Mile Front.

BULLETIN

BERLIN — (AP) — German forces have wiped out Red army units encircled south of Smolensk and captured 35,000 prisoners and 245 cannon, DNB, the official news agency, reported today.

(By Associated Press)

Adolf Hitler's invasion armies were pictured in London reports today as stalled along the whole 2,000-mile Soviet war front during the past 24 hours and near the point of exhaustion, and in Moscow, Harry L. Hopkins expressed "even more confidence that Hitler is going to lose."

From the German fuehrer's headquarters came another communique of extreme brevity, barren of any detail:

"Battles on the east front continue to develop in our favor.

"Warplanes last night bombarded military objectives in Moscow."

DNB, the official German news agency, declared Nazi troops on the far southern front had forced a passage across the Dniester river, near the Bessarabian town of Cetatea-Alba, threatening Russia's great Black Sea port of Odessa, 30 miles away.

DNB asserted that German artillery fire halted troop trains attempting to withdraw Soviet

Roosevelt Calls Red Resistance 'Magnificent'

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt asserted today that Russia's resistance to the Axis war machine was "magnificent" and "frankly better than any military expert in Germany thought it would be."

That was his reply at a press conference—he authorized direct quotes—to an inquiry on what he thought of Russian resistance to date. He said:

"It is magnificent and frankly better than any military experts in Germany thought it would be."

When a reporter, referring to Adolf Hitler, asked whether Mr. Roosevelt included Germany's outstanding military expert among those surprised at the Russian resistance, the president suggested that newsmen not spoil the story.

A laugh was his only response to another question—whether Germany had been doing some tall lying.

The chief executive said that Russia did not come under terms of the lease-lend bill and he saw no prospect that she would. The

Kyle, Studying Anti-Noise Laws, Set to Propose Bill

Armed with copies of the New York city and Memphis, Tenn., anti-noise ordinances, Councilman George C. Kyle today prepared to draft an ordinance against unnecessary horn blowing in Mansfield.

Kyle said that he would present the ordinance to city council at its regular meeting Tuesday night.

The councilman's action follows a month-long campaign in the city to curb unnecessary traffic noise. Canvasses of public opinion, statements by officials, and individual efforts on the part of motorists have highlighted the drive which is expected to climax with consideration of the proposed ordinance.

New York's successful ordinance includes the following section:

"The sounding of any horn or signal device on any automobile, motorcycle, bus, street car, or other vehicle while stationary, except as a danger signal when an approaching vehicle is apparently out of control, or, if in motion, only as a danger signal after or as brakes are being applied and deceleration of the vehicle is intended; the creation by means of any such signal device of any unreasonably loud or harsh sound for the sounding of any such device for an unnecessary and unreasonable period of time."

This, said Kyle, would curb drivers who push down on both the horn and the accelerator at the same time and "blast" their way through traffic. It makes it compulsory to apply brakes

Hitler's agents underwent a series of rebuffs indicating American hemisphere unity. These included:

1. Mexico sharply rebuked the German government for suggesting that she protest President Roosevelt's blacklist of pro-Axis firms, declaring the Nazi proposal was "imperious" and threatening.

2. Mexico's President Manuel Avila Camancho issued an order drastically restricting demonstrations by the powerful Sinarquistas movement, which government spokesmen described as Nazi-Fascist.

3. Argentina told German Ambassador Edmund Von Thermann to re-export or destroy a short-wave radio transmitter which was seized in Nazi diplomatic pouches —an incident which had aggravated relations between Buenos Aires and Berlin.

Mexico's Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla minced no words in scorning the German proposal.

The German minister, Rudt Von Collenburg, had called the blacklist "unjust and transcendental" and a violation of Mexican sovereignty, in a note to the Mexican government. He said it was Mexico's "duty" to protect affected firms.

Mexico replied she alone is "competent, in absolute fashion, to note on what occasions the liberty of commerce and the sovereignty of Mexico are injured."

In Europe, Germany awaited news of advances in the Leningrad area while Russians were cheered by reports of defense successes in the Smolensk sector where the main German drive on Moscow was halted.

The Soviet information bureau indicated that the Red army took the initiative on the 17th day of the battle of Smolensk to push back the invaders at some points, capturing prisoners and war material.

Harry L. Hopkins, U. S. lease-lend administrator, had a three-hour private talk with Premier Joseph Stalin yesterday, his second since his unexpected arrival in Moscow by plane.

He was believed to have told the Russian leader that American production of war materials would surpass any foreign estimates.

Three weeks of border warfare between Ecuador and Peru ended last night but not before Peru said that her forces, including parachute troops, has regained all territory taken by the Ecuadorean army.

Buenos Aires expected that envoys of the two countries would meet later this month with representatives of the United States, Argentina and Brazil to try to negotiate a non-aggression treaty and reach a permanent settlement of the century-old dispute.

Two Jap Liners Tied Up at U. S. Port

SAN FRANCISCO —(INS)— Two Japanese luxury liners, which had delayed their arrival in United States ports, wary of seizure, were tied up under federal government orders at Pacific coast docks today, with little hope for early release.

The $15,000,000 Nippon Yusen Kaisha liner Tatuta Maru, docked at San Francisco after hovering off the Golden Gate for six days with 247 passengers and a $2,500 silk cargo, was seized by the U. S. marshal on libel actions filed by importers of part of her cargo, and in addition was being searched by customs men on a mysterious tip that $1,000,000 in contraband United States currency had been smuggled aboard.

At Seattle, the NYK motorship Heian Maru was held on libel actions totalling $150,000.

New Plan of Action Against Japs Planned

WASHINGTON —(INS)— An understanding has been reached between the United States, Great Britain, the Netherlands East Indies and China concerning action to be taken in the event of further Japanese aggression in the southern Pacific informed sources disclosed today.

Details of the four-power understanding are being kept secret, but it is understood to provide for a drastic strengthening of economic sanctions against the Nippon empire as well as for the mutual use of military and naval bases in case any one of the western powers become involved in war with Japan.

Discussions are now under way between the United States and Britain concerning plans to tighten the screws of economic pressure on the Japanese if they move into Thailand. These plans were believed to have been discussed at a White House conference late yesterday between President Roosevelt and British Ambassador Lord Halifax.

U. S. Accepts Jap Apologies on Bombing

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The Japanese bombing of the gunboat Tutuila was marked a closed incident in the state department today, but concern in congress over the far eastern situation caused talk of delaying independence for the Philippines indefinitely.

Acting Secretary of State Welles, after conferring with President Roosevelt, announced last night the United States had accepted the official apologies of the Japanese government for the attack on the U. S. gunboat near Chunking, China, yesterday.

The apologies, he disclosed, were accompanied by an offer to pay indemnities for the damage the ship suffered, and by assurances that measures would be taken to prevent the recurrence of such incidents in the future.

Welles indicated earlier that nothing short of full amends would satisfy the United States for he rejected the hurried regrets and assurances expressed in Tokyo as preliminary and inadequate.

and that men fainted daily in the streets from hunger.

The travelers said the Greeks were "recklessly" pro-British, harbored many hundreds of British soldiers caught there when the British expeditionary force left, held their fingers to their nostrils when German and Italian troops passed in the streets, cheered all British war prisoners, and left restaurants and cafes when Germans or Italians entered.

Radio Moscow, in a dispatch picked up at New York by the United Press listening post, reported from Berne that Germany's embarrassing position on the eastern front had caused many prominent Nazis to rush deposits to Swiss banks. Baldur von Schirach, the Nazi "high commissioner" at Vienna; Paul Gobbels, Nazi propaganda minister; Robert Ley, Nazi labor front leader, and Baron Constantin von Neurath, member of Hitler's cabinet council on foreign affairs, were said to be among the depositors.

The Stockholm dispatch on sabotage at Alesund said Norwegian patriots had damaged German communications and military establishments and that the Germans had seized 10 leading citizens as hostages. When police took the hostages to a ship for transport to Germany, the dispatch said, a crowd of about 5,000 persons gathered at the dock and tried to rescue them. It was necessary for police to call soldiers, the dispatch said.

The Ankara dispatch on disaffection in Greece said German authorities no longer sounded air raid alarms when British planes raided airdromes because Greeks at once climbed to rooftops to cheer the British raiders.

reason, he said, is that Russia is able to pay for the purchase in this country of war equipment to be tossed into the battle against Germany.

No decision may be expected on an additional lease-lend appropriation, the chief executive asserted, until Harry L. Hopkins returns to this country. Hopkins, lease-lend supervisor, now is in Moscow, after having visited London.

Mr. Roosevelt said the only word he had had from Hopkins since his arrival in the Russian capital was that he had got there safely.

Mr. Roosevelt would not say whether Hopkins might return by way of China.

Mr. Roosevelt had no comment on a suggestion that July had seen a definite turn in the war with Russian resistance stiffening.

Nor did he have anything to say on conditions in the Far East or on shipments of oil to Japan. He said also, he had heard nothing of the possibility of lease-lend aid to the Free French Allies of Britain.

The president did say that he hoped to get away early next week and go up the coast somewhere where at least the nights would be cool. He said he wanted a week off.

GLADIOLI 'TAKE' CITY'S GARDENS

Fragile Flowers Give Added Brilliance To Landscape of Homes Here.

He also has some prize winning bulbs.

While many home gardeners have given up the raising of gladioli in the last few years because of thrip, a blight that destroys the flowers, Dir said he had prevented the pest in his own garden by weekly spraying.

He begins this process when the stalks are about six inches high and continues it until the blooming season is over, shortly before freezing weather arrives.

Even though they look hardy gladioli require as much care as the more fragile-appearing garden flowers, according to Dir.

The stems crook in the hot sun and the weather the last few days has had a telling effect on some of the stalks.

But the damage has been negligible Dir pointed out because only a portion of the bulbs are in bloom at one time.

When the weather is real hot, Dir explained, he sprays the garden with a rain wave that keeps a continual mist over the flowers. This not only saves them from wilting but also prevents blight.

The end of the blooming season does not mean the end of work for the gardener, the gladioli-grower said. Every stalk must be cut and the bulbs dried. Then the mother root is peeled away and the new bulb is stored for use the next year.

In the spring the bulbs are brought out of storage each variety is placed in a cord sack, and soaked in a solution of corrosive sublimate and water for two hours in order to kill any germ that might exist. The bulbs are then dried and are ready for planting.

At least one-half of the bulbs in Dir's garden came from California and the remainder from Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Right now there is a splurge of rich color in the garden where flowers bearing such euphonious names as Amber Glow, butter-yellow, Early Melody, soft lavendar, J. S. Bach, a rich red, Peggy Lou and Picardy, salmon pink, seem to fuse into one great bloom.

Each of the stalks produce between 10 and 12 flowers, Dir said, and some of the flowers measure seven inches across.

school, he has directed the Junior Safety patrol which has handled the moving back and forth of Mansfield children between schools and home daily. In the five years of his efforts as junior safety officer, not one child has been fatally injured in an auto accident in the city.

Boals plans to "spot" the bad intersections in the city by having the squad investigate all traffic accidents. By concentrating on these bad points until he has discovered the reason for the accidents, Boals hopes to eliminate the greater part of them.

"We are not going to concentrate on minor traffic infractions," said Boals, "but we will bear down upon any practices leading to accidents."

The new squad will enforce all city traffic regulations, investigate accidents, make parking meter collections and develop ways and means to improve traffic conditions in the city.

Boals pointed out that although the squad will investigate traffic complaints that the most important thing will be to get a traffic program into practice.

"With the establishment of a good traffic program, education and enforcement, most of the complaints will be eliminated," said Boals.

Serving on the squad will be Boals, Schuck Kyler, Conrady, Robert E. Robnolte, Richard Hecht, Roeliff Hout, and Robert L. Garver. Conrady, the last man to be appointed, has been employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company for the past eight years.

Conrady was named to fill the post turned down by Charles P. Robnolte, a guard at Ohio State reformatory, for financial reasons.

CONGRESS LAGS ON ARMY DRAFT

Reported Far From Decision as Army's Deadline For Urgent Action Passes.

tary committee two weeks ago, Marshall said if no action was taken by today, the army would have to bring home important garrison units from outlying bases and prepare to mobilize them. Furthermore, he said, replacing those units would be difficult because the available replacement units contained men nearing the end of their service.

Clark and Vandenberg found much to criticise in the measure which would authorize the president to keep men in service so long as he deemed they were needed for national defense or until congress terminated this authority by a concurrent resolution.

"This bill keeps those soldiers in for life and the only answer the administration people have to that is 'you don't think the president would do that, do you?'" Clark declared.

Agreeing with this view, Vandenberg said he thought it would be "bad for the morale of the citizen soldiers not to know when their service would end."

Meanwhile, administration leaders were reported to be seeking to work out some sort of compromise in language which would terminate the proposed presidential powers on a definite date.

Senator Taft (R.-Ohio) who has proposed that the service of selectees be limited to 18 months, said there appeared to be increasing support for his proposal but Senator Hill (D.-Ala.), the Democratic whip, made it plain that the administration would fight the draft substitute.

forces from the southern front, and it continued:

"The Bolshevist forces had to leave the train and accept battle. In stubborn hand-to-hand fighting, Soviet units were completely wiped out, with great bloody losses."

A whole Red division (about 15,000 men), DNB said, was smashed in a "gruesome scene of terrible destruction."

Moscow dispatches said Soviet troops were taking the initiative at some points in the vast battle-line, and a Red army bulletin reported fierce overnight fighting in the Smolensk sector, 230 miles west of Moscow; in the Zhitomir sector, west of Kiev, the Ukraine; and in the Novorzhev sector, 200 miles south of Leningrad.

In Berlin, Nazi editors countered assertions that the German offensive had bogged down with a "wait and see" attitude. Again they stressed that it was more important to destroy Russia's armies than to win ground.

Authoritative quarters in London declared there was "absolutely no indication" the fall of Leningrad or a Soviet defeat on the vital central front at Smolensk were imminent.

Aside from its 19-word summary of the battle with Russia, Hitler's high command emphasized overnight activities of the Luftwaffe, noting attacks on Moscow, the Suez Canal, the British east and south coasts and shipping in English waters.

and slow down every time the horn is sounded.

Another section of the New York ordinance outlaws:

"The discharge into the open air of the exhaust of any steam engine, stationary internal combustion engine, motor vehicle or motor boat engine except through a muffler or other device which will effectively prevent loud or explosive noises therefrom."

Excessive noises near institutional buildings are outlawed by another section which defines the offense thus: "The creation of any excessive noise on any street adjacent to any school, institution of learning or court while the same is in session, or adjacent to any hospital, which unreasonably interferes with the workings of such institution, provided conspicuous signs are displayed in such streets indicating that the same is a school, hospital, or court building."

Kyle said the New York and Memphis ordinances were substantially the same except for penalties for law violations.

New York fines offenders one dollar for the first offense, $2 for the second, $4 for the third, and $10 for all offences thereafter. Memphis provides a uniform fine of from $1 to $50 for each offense and leaves the amount to the court to decide.

freight." Schram claimed that with few adjustments dies and presses now turning out war planes could stamp out private airplanes almost as rapidly as autos are now run off conveyor belts.

"Thus," he said, "America has a product that will probably be within the reach of average pocketbooks."

The next thing is to train pilots who can operate the new products and that's where the Civilian Pilots Training Program comes in, Schram said.

Finally Schram pointed out that if Mansfield is to share in this new industry and have it help the city out of the next depression, the city must have an adequate airport.

Robert Remy, president of the Senior chamber of commerce, said he and the chamber believed the bond issue would be supported by popular vote.

C. G. Hillier, representing the Rotary club, called for the vote and after it passed Dr. Bonar appointed Hillier as chairman of the following committee: Jack Balliett, C. J. Kalbfleisch, Edward Balyeat, John Vogt, M. J. Marviscin, Mrs. J. C. Zimmerman, Mrs. Thomas McDermott, Herbert Rusk and Alvin L. Krieg.

Harrington this morning asserted that $80,810,110 which the Civil Aeronautics administration in Washington voted to construct and improve airports today would not affect the Mansfield situation.

"That money," he said, "will very probably be used exclusively along the East and West coasts for military aviation fields and will not change the situation here in any way."

Bar Association Has New Plan for Choice of Judges

CHICAGO—(INS)—To establish a system of electing judges with elimination of political campaigning the American Bar Association proposed a plan providing for a nominating commission composed of leading citizens, none of whom is an officeholder.

The commission would, when a vacancy in the judiciary occurs, name a group of candidates from which the governor would make a selection. The judge named would then be required to run on his record. His name would appear on the ballot and the voters would be asked to decide whether he should be retained in office.

Only by removing politics from the judiciary does the Association believe that outstanding lawyers can be induced to give up their private practices and take up the work of the bench.

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 1, 1941.

As nearly as can be ascertained there are no entrants in the contest for the Nobel peace award this year.

We already know that reports from Berlin can't be believed—and, anyhow, those from Moscow make pleasanter reading.

A survey reveals more than 100 committees devoted to saving America—any one of which you can encourage by sending $5 or more.

To Start Traffic Law Enforcement

THERE may be an inclination, as Mansfield's police department gets its "traffic squad" into operation, to expect too much in the way of immediate results.

Bad driving practices have become so much of a habit among many Mansfield motorists—some of them quite law-abiding citizens in other respects—that no overnight metamorphosis can be expected.

It should also be considered that Mansfield has thus far experienced no consistently maintained traffic law enforcement, such as prevails in many other cities, and that a wise policy would be to start with warnings in instances of so-called "minor violations," so that well-intentioned motorists are given opportunity to voluntarily correct some of the bad driving habits to which they have become accustomed and which they may not realize are violations of law.

Excessive speed on city streets, ignoring stop signs, going through red and amber lights, making turns at intersections without regard to safety of pedestrians, insufficient lights after nightfall, using center lane to pass cars waiting for light changes, needless honking of horns, and the like, are among the common violations of traffic regulations in Mansfield.

Many of these faults can be corrected voluntarily by motorists willing to co-operate with better enforcement policies, and arrest of a few of the habitual offenders, with occasional suspension of driving license, will probably have a deterrent effect on others.

Wheat Exceeds Storage Capacity

ONE agricultural-minded Mansfielder expresses belief that a valuable civic service could be performed by erection of a large elevator for the storage of surplus wheat.

It appears that the limit of capacity along this line has been reached and that the national wheat surplus is also presenting a serious storage problem.

All this in spite of federal laws and subsidies to keep down production. Last year there was the most enormous wheat carry-over in our history and a harvest of 900,000,000 bushels is predicted for this year.

Other countries could use this surplus, and would rejoice to get it, but under war conditions very little wheat can be shipped and it has been uselessly piling up like the surplus gold and silver in the United States treasury.

This condition proves at least one thing—that unrestricted wheat production in the United States exceeds the total that can be consumed in this country and that world markets must be re-opened for exchange of surplus commodities or still less wheat grown here.

Atoms as Source of Power

HENRY FORD is credited with a plan to produce a cheap automobile after the present war, in order to restore prosperity as he is said to have done after the last one. It might sell for $500, and even with its cheapness would include some features not yet in use.

But if some of the super-scientists are right, there may be bigger possibilities for transportation than heretofore dreamed of. "Atomic power" for instance.

That idea was first taken seriously by many people last year, when scientists began to succeed in their efforts to "crack the atom" and make direct use of the immense power contained in those invisible little units of matter. Every atom seems to be a sort of gyroscope of vast potency. The problem is to explode some of the larger atoms and use the power thus released to operate machinery.

A scientist reported in Harper's Magazine last summer a method by which a heavy atom, continually bombarded by a light atom, would give off excess power capable of useful work. A tiny pinch of such matter, it was said, sealed into an atomic motor, might provide ample power to run an automobile for its lifetime.

That is an idea to toy with, but for the present it can be left to the realm of scientists and fiction writers. While the world is at war the potentialities of the atom may well remain undisturbed.

Deferment for Agricultural Students

SHORTAGE of farm workers and increasing need for farm produce has resulted in the state headquarters of the selective service system giving further emphasis to the fact that deferment of agricultural students is permitted, as well as of young men actually engaged in agricultural pursuits.

According to Lieut. Col. C. W. Goble, state director of selective service, local boards have ample authority to defer students of agriculture as men "in training or preparation for necessary occupations."

He also emphasized that a growing shortage of farm workers calls for special consideration of individual claims of young men now engaged in agricultural work.

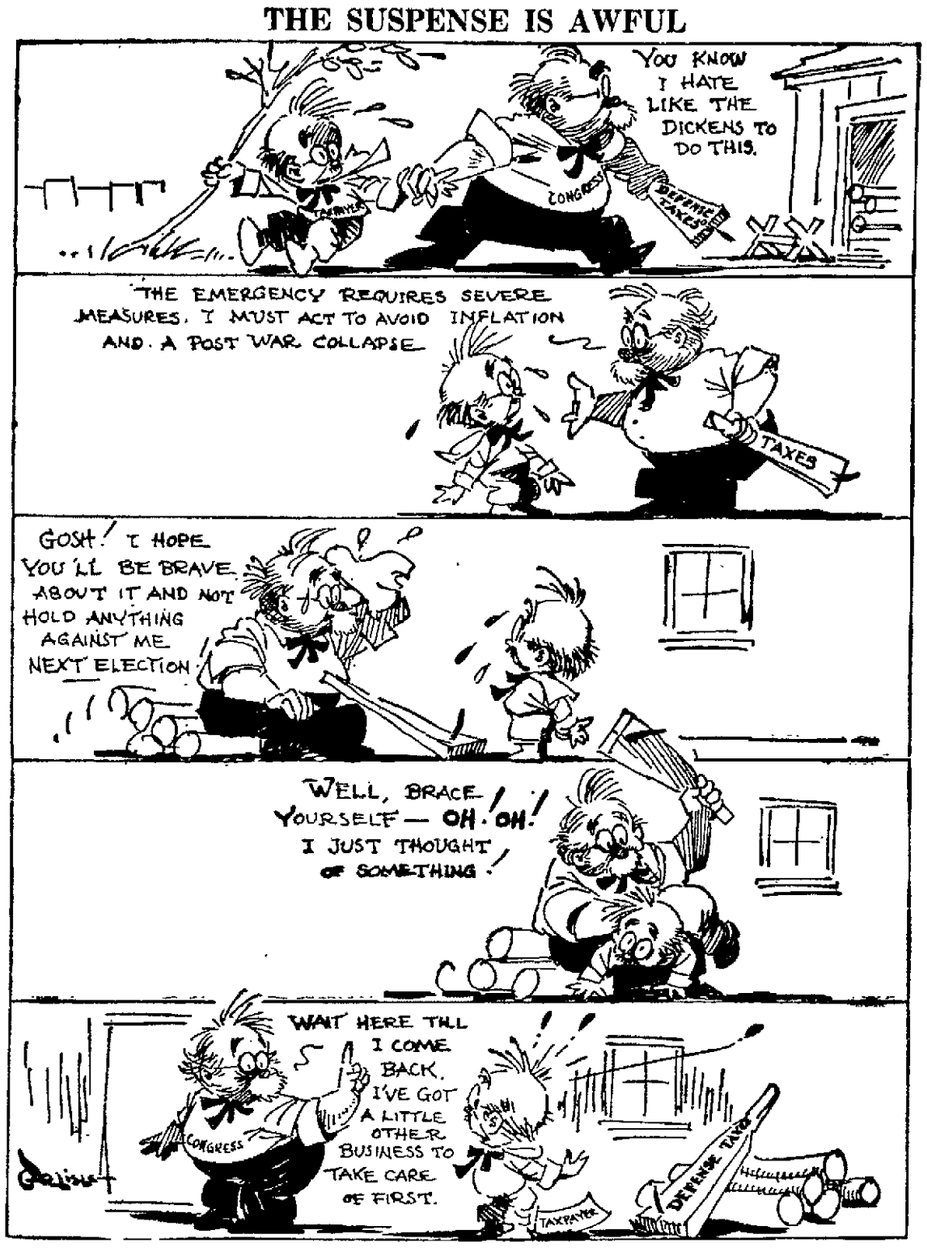

In addition to this recognition of the advantage of permitting students of agriculture to continue in college until completion of their courses, there is also an inclination to defer other college students until after graduation.

Two-Way Messenger Pigeons

SOME progress is finally being reported in the long-time effort to establish two-way messenger pigeon service. The army signal corps claims to have mastered this problem after everybody from Alexander the Great on down to this generation had failed.

All these centuries people have wanted birds that would not only carry messages in one direction, but would bring answers back. Pigeon communication was too much like a one-way telephone. The birds would fly home with a message, wherever home might be, but that ended the correspondence for the time being. Now the signal men at Fort Monmouth, N. J., say that after two months of concentrated instruction they have taught pigeons to fly with messages and bring back replies, at the rate of 60 miles an hour.

THE SUSPENSE IS AWFUL

More 'Dodgers' In World War I

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Young America is a great deal more patriotic, more intelligent, better informed and less rebellious toward laws laid down for it than young America was in World War I.

That conclusion can be drawn from some figures from the department of justice.

After approximately 10 months since the first selective service registration, the department tells me it has had 20,000 complaints of violation of the selective service laws. There have been 226 individuals convicted and there are 365 persons awaiting trial.

If these seem startling figures, just compare them with Maj. Gen. Enoch Crowder's report on the draft in World War I. Fifteen months after the first registration then, 474,861 "draft dodgers" had been reported; 67,838 men had been apprehended and sent to camp or to prison; and still there were 295,184 cases on the books for the Federal Bureau of Investigation to ferret out.

Editorial campaigns and word-of-mouth battles, pro and con, were waged against "slackers" (men who failed or refused to register); "delinquents" (men who refused to obey or ignored orders to report for induction).

As far as the public was concerned, they were either "slackers" or "draft dodgers" and for the most part were considered just a step below a worm. It is particularly significant that although we are nearing the one-year mark for selective service today, there has been hardly a mention of "slackers" and "draft dodgers."

Big Round-Ups.

IN THE spring and summer of 1918, when the World War I draft law was only a shadow older than the present one, the FBI was conducting "slacker raids" in key industrial centers. The first was in Pittsburgh in March. So successful was it in netting draft dodgers, similar raids followed immediately in Chicago and Boston. Seven hundred "deserters" were picked up in the former city and 800 in the latter. But the daddy of all such raids was held in New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City between September 3 and 6. On those three days, more than 50,000 men were examined or rounded up for questioning. When it was all over, 16,505 "draft dodgers" either had been packed off to camp or were held for trial.

All of this happened in a period when only 10,640,846 men had registered for the draft — compared to approximately 17,250,000 who have registered today.

Aside from the fact that World War I was a shooting war and this, so far, isn't for the United States, draft evasions follow pretty much the same pattern. Most delinquencies arise from ignorance of the law or simple indifference to it.

One fellow investigated recently was in jail and didn't get his mail; another was snowed in and couldn't report for induction; another moved and failed to leave a forwarding address; a fourth just wrote his board: "Dear Local Draft Board No. —: I never saw anybody go to so much trouble to make mass-murderers of us. Love."

When finally caught up with he said he was just "having some fun" and went along to camp meekly enough. Another said he didn't believe in the statute and "there isn't anything in America worth fighting for anyway." And so it goes.

Most of It Unnecessary.

IT CAUSES a lot of grief for the FBI and the Department of Justice, but their only complaint is that most of it is unnecessary. Strict compliance of willing youths with the law would cut the delinquencies to an insignificant number. If the reported delinquents, who really are without blame, would report to their boards or the FBI as soon as they are on the trouble list, it would cut that number in half.

But even as it is, it appears that the youngsters of today are smart enough and sufficiently on the side of selective service so that the government will never have to stoop to the World war level of putting a $50 reward on the head of every draft evader.

Training for Girls

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

I'VE BEEN READING, with much interest, of a newly proposed plan to give girls the equivalent of a year's draftee training. That plan was proposed some months ago in this column, as it was in several others. But I'm not sure now whether any of us were talking sense. It sounded smart—but was it?

The only trouble with giving females a year's military training is—females. Being one of them, I'm fairly hep to our mutual weaknesses. And I'm beginning to wonder if said training wouldn't raise more Cain than 57 varieties of foreign invasion.

THE TROUBLE WITH GIVING LADIES AN INCH OF PUBLIC LIFE IS THAT THEY'LL IMMEDIATELY GRAB TEN MILES AND THEN KEEP GOING.

In other words, if you think you can put a million American Femmes into military camps and perfectly fascinating uniforms for a year—not to mention all the fun and freedom that accompany the same—and then expect them to go back home and be obscure, contented wives and mothers, you're simply kidding yourself.

It's all very well to say that a normal woman's only lasting contentment lies in her home and family . . . but the last twenty years of modern life have conditioned the average American girl to quite a different outlook. Glamour ads, movie roles and industrial opportunity have given her a vastly changed attitude toward herself.

THE AVERAGE MODERN GIRL IS AN EXHIBITIONIST—AN EXCITEMENT SEEKER. PUBLICITY IS HER DISH. SHE CRAVES ADVENTURE AS A TIGRESS CRAVES A CHOICE SIRLOIN STEAK . . . AND HAVING GRABBED IT, JUST TRY AND TAKE IT FROM HER.

This statement will meet with indignant denials, particularly from males who, for obvious reasons, prefer to believe that women are clinging creatures who desire babies and bungalows above all else. Lovely illusion, but 'tisn't so. The last thing the Beautiful Babe of 1941 desires is to be shut up in four walls and permanent obscurity. She may have her session with Romance — and it's never far out of her mind. But on one thing she is determined; she's "not going to let any man cramp her style as Grandpa did Gramma's."

There's a reason for this, of course. Housekeeping gets to be a dull job. Baby-tending is a dreary routine. It's increasingly hard to sit behind the Venetian blinds in a faded housedress while your beautifully groomed friends troop by to work and adventure, particularly if you've been one of that sleek sisterhood yourself.

So suppose we give the Sweet Girl Graduate even more independence? Encourage her to share more masculine pursuits and privilege? What will happen to her—and to our American homes and families?

WILL THE TRICK TECHNIQUE SHE'LL LEARN AT HER 'SERVICE CAMP' EVER SERVE HER NATION . . . OR FEED HER OWN SOUL . . . AS LOVE, MARRIAGE AND MOTHERHOOD WOULD?

WILL SHE EVER BE ABLE TO FORGET THE GLAMOR AND BE CONTENT WITH A QUIET GARDEN, A BABY'S LAUGH, A MAN'S GRATEFUL, ADORING SMILE?

I wonder. What's YOUR BET? Yes—we'd like to have it—publish it in this column.

Wheeler Fails to Uphold Right Of Free Speech In Home State

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—It certainly is risky to oppose Senator Burt Wheeler on his isolationist-appeasement stand in Montana.

Although he never misses an opportunity to beat his breast noisily about freedom of speech and press, Wheeler wields a ruthless axe on critics in his home state. Several weeks ago Walter Winchell was barred from three Montana radio stations owned by Wheeler intimates. Latest to feel the scourge of Wheeler's ire is John Erickson, three times governor of the state and for a short term U. S. senator.

Erickson presided at a Helena meeting addressed by Senator Claude Pepper, militant Florida anti-isolationist. A few days later, Governor Sam Ford, Republican closely allied with the Wheeler machine, fired Erickson from his $250-a-month job as assistant administrator of the Montana liquor board.

Note: The state convention of the American Legion and the Butte Miners union have adopted resolutions condemning the barring of Winchell from the Montana radio stations.

Credit to Fascist Spain?

ON DECEMBER 13, 1940 this column published the fact that the state department was considering a $100,000,000 credit to Fascist Spain in order to keep General Franco from throwing Spain into the war on the side of the Axis. That story was emphatically and officially denied by Secretary of State Cordell Hull and also by the United Secretary of State Sumner Welles.

Subsequent cable dispatches from Spain and Portugal to the New York Times referred to the proposed $100,000,000 credit, but there was no official confirmation of the story.

Seven months later, however, on July 17 General Franco, speaking before the National Council of the Spanish Falange (Spanish Fascist party) delivered a violent tirade against the United States for attempting to intervene in the European war. During the course of this speech General Franco accused the United States of "offering" Spain economic help in order to force Spain to obey the will of other nations, presumably Britain.

This would appear to be definite confirmation that a credit was actually "offered" to Fascist Spain in order to keep her neutral.

Shuttling the Navy.

THE THING which has worried U. S. admirals for some months is what they call "shuttling": that is taking part of the fleet from the Pacific to the Atlantic to meet danger in the East then back to the Pacific to meet a new danger in the West. This, the admirals feared, would merely keep the fleet on the high seas, using up fuel in a game as profitable as "fox and geese."

And this, obviously is what the Japanese (with their Nazi allies) are trying to trap us into doing.

However, although it remains a fact that part of the Pacific fleet has gone into the Atlantic to help "patrol," nevertheless, the United States finds itself in a better position than the admirals some months ago expected.

Here are the reasons:

1st, we have acquired some emergency bases in the Dutch East Indies, and it may be that one or two U. S. ships might drop in on these bases from time to time.

2nd, we have been concentrating long range bombers in the Philippines and the islands of the Pacific. The Japanese know this, and it worries them almost more than anything else. These bombers easily can fly from Manila to Tokyo and back again.

3rd, we took the precaution of placing a strong submarine force in and around the Philippines. And submarines can disrupt Japanese troop ships, tankers, supply ships more than any other type of weapon.

4th, the fortification of various Pacific islands—Guam, Midway, Wake, and crucial bases in the Philippines—has been proceeding at a tremendous speed.

So if the Russians can hold out until fall, the Japanese may really find themselves out on a limb. Of course, if the Russians cave in and Hitler's forces are unleashed for operations in the Atlantic, especially around Spain, Portugal and Dakar, it may be a different story.

Good Neighbor Frauds.

IN A FEW weeks the post office department will give a new twist to the blacklist of Axis agents in Latin America.

Postal authorities will indict a bunch of U. S. operators who have been using the Good Neighbor policy to defraud Latin Americans out of large sums of money.

The racket was an ingenious one.

Posing as mail-order houses, the crooks flooded Latin American papers with ads offering at cut prices goods formerly supplied by German and Italian firms. In each instance the ad required the buyer to send payment in advance.

Some of the promotions were on a huge scale. One advertisement which offered sets of "self-fitting" false teeth for $10 brought hundreds of responses. Another which offered a well-known patent medicine netted the racketeers more than $50,000.

In every case, the buyers lost their money. The alleged mail-order houses consisted of nothing more than a lock box in a post office, changed at frequent intervals to avoid detection. No goods ever were shipped.

Authorities first got wind of the racket when U. S. consuls reported being bombarded with complaints from victims. The consuls warned Washington that the fraud was giving U. S. business a black eye which no amount of good willing could overcome.

So the postal inspection service, which has jurisdiction over rackets of this nature, immediately got busy, with the result that in a few weeks ring leaders of the fraud will be "jail house bound."

Timely Editorial

Forty-Seven Are Safer.

One element of complete defense is the know-how of the defense of cities against air attack. The United States need not yet develop anti-aircraft defenses on the British scale, but knowledge of the know-how is a first step.

Police and fire department officials from 47 east coast cities are sending representatives to Edgewood Arsenal, New Jersey, to take a course in methods of combating bombing attacks; similar representatives of 40 cities have just completed a course setup by the chemical warfare section of the Army in combating demolition and incendiary bombs and poison gas. Similar courses for cities along the Gulf and Pacific Coasts, and later the central states, will be given.

Of all the preparedness measures, such as these are the most purely defensive, and a country whose cities know in advance what to do in case of air attack is a less vulnerable country.—Cleveland Press.

A Farmer's Diary

A Rare Farm House

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

DOWN in the southernmost corner of our county, in a little valley called "Lost Run," a successful farmer lives. I do not know exactly how old he is, but he confided that he has lived with his wife more than 55 years and would never, never marry another Quaker. "I love her just as much as I ever did," he twinkled, "but here of late years I don't seem to have much enthusiasm about it — she says she's glad I don't."

His wife, a frail, serene, white-haired woman, sat on a rocking chair. Her quiet presence fitted well the Quaker tradition. She inspired and gave delight without the slightest hint of effort, and it was plain that hers was the charm that made their home complete. She was gracious without exuberance; tidy and conscientious, competent and calm. My wife and I felt honored to be in such companionship.

"Yes, the furniture—those old handmade kitchen chairs—is past the century mark. The kitchen clock has run continuously for more than 90 years. Listen—hear it tick?"

We looked and listened. A robust tick-tock came from the dark-checked case on the mantel. Just below it stood a streamlined, white enameled, electric refrigerator that suddenly became animated and shortly stopped.

"The ancient keeping time for the modern," observed our host. "Those pictures on the wall are of our grandchildren. We have several great grandchildren, too. One grandson finished his Master's degree at Ohio State the other day. We like to visit with the grandchildren—and get the gist of what's new. Things have changed so since I went to college, myself.

"This house was built from timber that grew on the place. Tall straight tulip poplars were seasoned in the log and sawed for siding. The studding, joists and rafters are oak. The stone for the wall was gathered from the hillside. No stranger built this house. We sheathed the sides and put the roof over our own heads. Somehow when storms come and winter nights are cold, it makes us more comfortable to know how carefully we built each part."

"You have done many of the things we are aiming to do," I told him. "I'll bet you have set out trees and harvested the fruit—or the timber."

"Why yes—come down by daylight and see our poplar grove."

"And I notice," I added, pointing to the table strewn with magazines and papers, "that you read most of the farm papers and the Saturday Evening Post. Maybe you write for the papers too!"

He grinned and flushed. "I have done it a few times—folks have flattered me—I don't like flattery. I believe"—quickly changing the subject—"that you might like to see an old Quaker marriage certificate that we have here. Could you find it easily, for him, mother?"

'KEYS OF THE KINGDOM,' NEW LIBRARY BOOK

Cronin's Story of Scottish Priest on New Book List Released Here.

"The Keys of the Kingdom," A. J. Cronin's new story of the life of Father Francis, a Scottish priest, is now available at the Mansfield Public Library.

The author of "The Citadel" traces the life of the priest from his Tweedside youth to the tragic event that leads him to take Holy Orders.

His subsequent years in a remote Chinese village where he labored single-handed against indifference, famine, plague and even torture are graphically described by the writer.

ONE BELL CALLS THE WATCH by Winter: CLAUDIA AND DAVID by Franken: MAIGRET TO THE RESCUE by Simenon.

SIR RICHARD BURTON'S WIFE by Jean Burton is the fascinating and unusual life-story of two eccentrics who so scandalized Victorian England. Sir Richard was a truly fantastic figure—a bold explorer, investigator of oriental mysticism and religions, translator of the unexpurgated "Arabian Nights" and a stormy petrel of the British Foreign Office; his wife, Lady Isabel, born of the great Catholic clan of Arundels was about as colorful and romantic a figure.

ALL OF THEIR LIVES by Myron Brinig is a study of the lives, emotions and love affairs of two girls from childhood to middle age—from McKinley's administration to today. While it is in part, the story of Dora Lattimer who was shy, introspective and "angelic"—it is, particularly, the story of Florence Gresham, wealthy, worldly and wilful, and of her many marriages. How the paths of these two crossed, dramatically and often, all of their lives, forms the theme of this new book by the author of The Sisters.

HALF THAT GLORY by Stanley Gray is a picaresque tale of love and adventure in which Christopher Keene flees from a tyrannical Virginian father. In London he meets the one woman, Cynthia Lanham. There too he meets Caron de Beaumarchais and together they establish a secret commerce, supplying the Americans with arms during the Revolutionary war.

BUSH MASTER by Nicol Smith is an authentic and exciting travel narrative which reads like fiction. This time the author went looking for adventure in Dutch Guiana—and he found it as a member of a strange expedition into the jungle in search of a radium mine, under the direction of an eccentric character known as the "Bush Master."

SPACE, TIME AND ARCHITECTURE by Sigfried Giedion is the author's interpretation of contemporary architecture, presented in both a modern and original manner. To arrive at an understanding of the new-cultural tradition, he explores specific events of the past intensively instead of giving a bird's eye-view. Though America is included in several discussions, about a sixth of the book deals definitely with American development. Well illustrated.

Ever since Ernest Hauser, author of Shanghai: City for Sale, first went to the Orient as a lad of 20, he has been attracted by the life of the people there. In his new book, HONORABLE ENEMY, he offers an authoritative and entertaining study of the enigmatic Japanese—their character, philosophy, life.

Other Non-Fiction: DOWN RIVER by Lehmann, HISTORY OF THE STATE OF OHIO Vol. 1 by Bond. FOR MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS by Parker, PEOPLE by Fairchild. INTERNATIONAL CONFEDERATION OF DEMOCRACIES by Johnsen. FEDERAL UNION by Pearce. HEALTHFUL LIVING by Diehl. CATHEDRALS. THE FREE COMPANY PRESENTS by Boyd. INDUSTRIAL PLASTICS by Simonds.

THEATERS

Bette As Comedienne.

Branching out as a comedienne after winning Academy Awards as an emotional actress Bette Davis is teamed with James Cagney in "The Bride Came C. O. D.," an uproarous film farce opening Saturday at the Ohio. Cagney plays the role of a pilot hired to take a bandleader and a young debutante to Las Vegas to be married. He decides however that he can make more money by delivering the bride, unmarried, to her father and plans to kidnap her. The cast includes Stuart Erwin, Eugene Pallette and Harry Davenport.

Stage Show.

The WLW Barn Dance company takes over the Madison stage for five performances Saturday including a midnight showing beginning at 11:20 p. m. Lulubelle and Scotty and all the other popular personalities on this radio program will appear with the company which will present its regular Saturday night broadcast from the Madison stage at 7:30 p. m. The film feature for Saturday only is "Bachelor's Daddy," starring Baby Sandy.

Medical Drama.

Lionel Barrymore is playing the screen's popular doctor-role again in "The People vs. Dr. Kildare," showing at the Ritz. Loraine Day and Lew Ayres are also featured. "The Two-Gun Sheriff," starring Don "Red" Berry is the second attraction.

Drama In Europe.

Based on Erich Maria Remarque's dramatic story, "So Ends Our Night," the current picture at the Park theater featuring Margaret Sullavan, Fredric March, Frances Dee and Glenn Ford concerns political refugees who are forced to flee to one city and then another as war spreads over Europe. March plays a former officer of the German army who becomes a barker in a Vienna amusement park after being expelled from his homeland. Frances Dee is cast as March's wife, persecuted because of her husband. Erich Von Stroheim, Anna Sten and Sig Rumann are others in the cast.

Prison Thriller.

Devil's Island, the dreaded penal colony, furnishes the locale for the thrilling drama, "I Was a Prisoner on Devil's Island," showing at the Majestic. Centering around Edward Ciannelli, black-hearted doctor of the prison colony; his enslaved wife, played by Sally Eilers and Donald Wood, as a young seaman imprisoned through a strange quirk of fate, the story deals with the efforts of the latter pair to escape. "Billy the Kid in Santa Fe," the second picture, features Bob Steele as the famous western character hired to rid one town of bandits while wanted in another for murder.

Heat Dries Real Estate Tax Take To Mere Trickle

After pouring $687,000 into the Richland county treasury during the first half of the year in one of the county's best tax collections, real estate tax receipts have slowed down to a mere trickle in the second half, County Treasurer John E. Kolb said today.

Tax books will close Aug. 20, and nearly two-thirds of the taxes are still unpaid, indicating a probable last-minute rush, the treasurer said.

Receipts now total $227,689 for the half-year period. Collections are expected to total close to $600,000. Biggest day's receipts so far was $9,750, while collections yesterday amounted to $3,878. Kolb blamed the slow collection on the heat and vacation season which, he said, are "taking property owners' minds off paying taxes."

EXTEND LOANS ON WHEAT TO APRIL 30, 1943

Government Says Extension To Affect Wheat Stored on Farms, Warehouses.

Government loans on wheat defined as excess under the AAA marketing quota provisions have been extended to April 30, 1943, by the U. S. department of agriculture, Guy Taylor, Richland county AAA chairman, said today.

The loan extension will affect wheat stored on farms or in warehouses, he added. The present maturity date on 1941 wheat loans is April 30, 1942.

"Extending the loans is expected to help farmers who overplanted their wheat acreage last season and now have considerable excess grain on hand," Taylor said. He pointed out that it will be possible to market this year's excess wheat next year without payment of the 49-cent penalty, provided the acreage allotment for the farm is underplanted or the farmer suffers a crop loss.

Taylor explained that county farmers who store excess wheat on their farms are entitled to seven cents per bushel as a storage allowance when the grain is delivered to the Commodity Credit corporation as payment of 1941 loans at the maturity date, or April 30, 1942.

If the farm storage loan is extended for another year, the farmer will receive an addition five cents per bushel, or a 12-cent allowance to April 30, 1943.

The federal loans on wheat, promised farmers on approval on the marketing quotas at a referendum last May, enable growers to hold grain on their farms for future sale. Loans on excess wheat are made at 60 per cent of the rate offered farmers who plant within their acreage allotments, Taylor said.

CHAPTER XXIII

"And I suppose you'll have a lot of servants."

"I suppose so. Everything's so cheap down there."

"It's a long ways from Klane's basement," Bonnie remarked, laughing. "A year ago little did we dream that either of us would be out of that place."

"I'm not marrying Ricardo to get out of going to work," Doris said sharply, thinking of May Whittier.

"Why am I marrying him?" Doris asked herself. "If I don't love him, why am I doing it?" But she put this thought, too, in the bottom of her mind. She would not allow herself to think anything which might change her plans. If the voice of conscience spoke, she would not listen.

"I talked to Don about your father. He seemed to think you were right about going to the police."

"And I may as well get it over with," Doris said with a sigh.

"I still can't see what good it will do. How will they ever find him now? You don't know where he is?"

"That isn't the point. It's the principle of the thing. I wouldn't feel right about it unless I had told the authorities what I knew. After I've done my duty, it's out of my hands. Whether or not they find him isn't up to me."

"Maybe he isn't wanted by the police at all. Maybe he just told you that to scare you."

"Even so, I can't take a chance. If I marry Ricardo, I'll be leaving the country soon, so I should get it done—and the sooner the better. I've been putting it off because I hate to go through with all the explanations."

"I don't blame you," Bonnie said folding the dish towels neatly on the blue rack. "If I were you, I wouldn't do it at all. There might be some publicity because you won the radio contest."

"That's why I hate to go through with it. But if I can sail right away, it won't matter so much."

The girls went into the living room and lit cigarets. Doris thought, "How different everything seems today. Last night I sat right here and was miserable. Now the whole world is different. That must prove that it's right for me to marry Ricardo."

Her heart told her that she was deceiving herself, that she could never go through with it. Her heart scoffed at the idea that she could forget Jimmy Allen or live happily with another man, but Doris was deaf to the voices within her.

"What are you going to say in your cable?" Bonnie asked.

"I haven't decided yet," Doris admitted.

"You can't just say YES, or can you?" laughed Bonnie.

Doris suddenly rose and cried in despair, "Bonnie! I just remembered! I haven't any money. How will I get back to Argentine?"

They stared at each other. "I paid Mrs. Ames two months rent in advance. I have only about twenty-five dollars left. That's all I've got in the world."

"Ricardo could send you the money, couldn't he?"

"I don't want to ask him, I'll have to find another way."

Bonnie put an affectionate arm about her shoulder. "Maybe Don and I can lend you the money. We have over five hundred dollars in the bank. We're saving it, but we don't need it now, and you can pay it back as soon as you and Ricardo are married."

Grateful tears sprang into Doris' eyes. "Oh, Bonnie, could you do that! I can send it back by the time you'll want it, and I won't need much. I'll be buying a one-way ticket this time."

One-way ticket to South America! It was the courage of desperation that had driven Doris to this decision, which undoubtedly held far-reaching consequences.

She left Bonnie's apartment feeling like an actress about to be launched in the most important play of her career. There was a taxi at the corner and Doris decided to take it. She felt that she must send that cable at once—before anything happened to alter her plans.

"Take me to the nearest telegraph office," she told the driver, and felt that she had just uttered the most significant words in her life.

Driving through the busy streets of Detroit, Doris let herself think for a moment. She had been born here in Detroit, and these streets were all dear in their familiarity. She would never see them again. She might never see this country again. She was marrying a foreigner and going to a strange land where even the language was different. In this mad moment she was throwing away both home and country.

"But I have to do it!" Doris told herself grimly. "It's my decision and I'll accept all the risks!"

But when she stood at the counter, pencil in hand and the yellow blank before her, her eye fell upon a newspaper. Seizing it in trembling hands, she saw Jimmy Allen's face staring at her. It was the picture that had been taken at the dock when the ship landed in New York. His showgirl wife was beside him, and Jimmy's face was stark with emotion and misery. He looked, as she had remembered, like a defeated little boy. His eyes seemed fastened upon her, staring lifelike from the photograph, reproaching her.

"I can't do it!" Doris thought wildly. "I love him. I'll always love him. I can't marry anyone else! I can't!"

A clerk appeared behind the counter. "May I help you?"

Doris looked at him and gasped, "No, no thank you. I've changed my mind."

He looked at her curiously but she did not care. Her eyes fell again upon Jimmy's picture. Fool! How could she have been fool enough to believe that she could kill her love for him? That handsome tortured face was indelibly engraved upon her heart. No other man, no amount of time, no distance could ever make her forget, or love him less.

"I'm just a one-man woman," Doris told herself as she walked out of the telegraph office. Maybe it's wrong, but I can't help it!"

Blindly she walked down the street scarcely knowing which direction she took. "Jimmy!" her heart cried. "Oh, darling, darling, why do things have to be like this for us? Why? Why?"

Doris did not know long she had been walking through the busy streets of Detroit. The picture of Jimmy she had seen in the discarded newspaper in the cable office followed her like a reproachful ghost. Now she knew that she could never marry Ricardo Torres. That was settled permanently. Doris trembled to think how close she had been to sending Ricardo the cable that would have changed her life. It seemed a stroke of fate that the newspaper should have been lying under her eyes, that at that crucial moment a picture of Jimmy Allen should decide the course of her destiny.

She turned into a drugstore and called Bonnie on the telephone.

"What now?" Bonnie inquired cheerfully.

Doris gulped, "I can't go through with it."

"You mean you haven't sent that cable?" Bonnie demanded in disapproval.

"I couldn't!" Doris admitted. "I saw a picture of Jimmy in the paper and it made me realize how much I love him."

There was a silence at the other end of the wire and finally Bonnie said, "Well, you'd better come out here, honey, and we'll talk it over."

Talking it over was exactly what Doris wished to avoid.

"I want to forget all about it," she said. "I'm going over to Klane's and see about getting a job."

Action was her one idea, and it was spurred on by the realization that she had less than twenty-five dollars.

She stopped at the fountain and ordered a cup of coffee. The steaming drink helped to calm her shaking nerves and ten minutes later she was in Klane's.

There was a line waiting in the employment office. Poorly-dressed anxious-eyed girls. Girls who looked curiously at Doris in her well tailored, expensive suit. Doris knew that they would never believe she needed a job as badly as they did, perhaps worse. For there was no one to help her now. She took her place and waited patiently.

She remembered well when she had first stood in this office, when she had quit high school to find work. Doris had thought she was the luckiest girl in the world when she went home and said, "I got the job, Mother! I'll get eighteen dollars a week!" It had been a fortune to her then. It had meant food and medicine for her mother, who was too ill to keep on with her work as a dressmaker. But three years in Klane's basement had done something to Doris, and at the death of her mother, she was utterly alone. It was a strange life for a girl in her teens, an age that should have been full of fun and freedom. Doris had longed to better herself, and winning the radio contest was her chance to have all she had missed.

Looking at the line of worried faces, Doris thought, 'I'm glad I went to South America!' At least I got out of this for a little while. I'll always have it to remember. Nothing can take that away from me."

It was better to have had a small taste of a life which had been full and exciting than never to have lived! Doris had something that many girls never found. She had gone on a trip to South America and had two romances—enough for a lifetime, she thought now. Suddenly Doris was ashamed of feeling sorry for herself. She lifted her head proudly, with new conviction, and with the new hope that shines through the darkest moments of one's life.

Miss Watson, in charge of employment, radiated sharp-eyed efficiency as she inquired, "And why did you quit your job here?"

Doris explained about the contest. It sounded perfectly ridiculous when put into words, and her explanation wavered under the disapproval of the woman across the desk. Doris could see that she thought her childish and stupid to have quit work and thrown away five thousand dollars.

"We're not taking on anyone now," Miss Watson informed her coldly. "You may leave your application, of course."

"But I thought since I worked here before you might give me preference," Doris said anxiously. "I need the work so badly."

Doris laughed hysterically. "Jimmy doesn't care whether I live or die."

"We'll soon see about that," Malone said calmly and he released her wrists.

Instantly Doris sprang for the door but Malone caught her by the shoulder and flung her to the floor. She screamed in terror. A wave of agony swept her back and shoulder as she lay sobbing, half unconscious. Malone pulled her roughly back up into the seat.

"I told you to take it easy, you little fool."

Doris huddled in the corner, unable to speak. Her panic had subsided into a dull acceptance. She knew it was useless to try to escape now.

Three hours later they arrived at their destination. It was a large cabin in the midst of the thick wilderness of a Michigan forest and it was apparently isolated. Thick boards were nailed across the windows. Malone pushed Doris through the doorway ahead of him.

In the dim light she could barely distinguish the wicker furniture, the oil lamp on the table. Malone struck a match and the room became alive with ironic cheerfulness. Obviously the cabin had been lived in, and recently. The floor had been swept, there were cigaret stubs in the ash trays and a pile of the latest magazines lay on the table. Was this where Malone had been hiding from the police?

Doris made her day to a large chair in the corner. Her arm was throbbing with pain, but it was not broken. She reproached herself bitterly. If she had gone to the police in the first place this would not have happened. Or had her father been trailing her even before today?

"What does it matter now?" Doris thought dully, watching Joe and Malone carry in sacks of groceries from the car. From the amount of food they had brought they must expect to be here for some time.

"This is impossible!" Doris told herself. "Things like this don't happen!" And as for Jimmy Allen's paying twenty-five thousand dollars . . . that was the most ridiculous part of the entire plan.

Malone opened the door into a small adjoining room. "Okay, Doris, get in here. I'm not taking any chances."

Silently Doris obeyed and heard him lock the door on the other side. In the dim lamplight, she could see that there was an old couch in the room, a bureau with a good sized mirror, and a table with some newspapers. On the bureau beside the lamp Doris found a package of cigarets, for which she was grateful. Lighting one, she curled up on the bed and tried to organize her confused thoughts. But the hand that held the cigaret shook so much that she could scarcely move it to her lips.

Kidnaped by her own father, who expected Jimmy Allen to pay for her release!

"I must be dreaming," Doris told herself desperately. This could not be real! It was some horrible nightmare from which she would awaken and find herself safe, back at Mrs. Ame's boarding house.

But from the other room came the voices of Joe and George Malone; Doris knew that this was no dream.

She remembered that she had told Bonnie about her father. Surely Bonnie would call the police when she learned that Doris had disappeared.

"They can't get away with it!" Doris tried to assure herself.

But at that moment she heard the lock click and her door opened.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

NEW YORK—Mr. Churchill, like Mr. Roosevelt, shuns a production pooh-bah. Both are right. After all the extreme statutory delegations of emergency authority, the startling assumptions of authority in surprise executive orders and the nice refinements of carefully drawn organizational charts nothing really counts but the caliber of the men on the particular jobs, their ability, their unselfishness and their willingness to work together under a common leader for a common national purpose.

You can have the best paper plan that could be devised. Without the proper men, it won't work. You can have the worst plan and, with the proper men, it will work. The answer, after all, isn't any super prima-donna dominating secondary prima donnae in separate cages. As Churchill says, God rarely, if ever makes such a man.

This isn't to say that clear assignments of authority and responsibility within particular fields are not necessary, or that prevention of conflicts and overlapping authority isn't indispensable. It is simply to say that the selection of the proper men and some plan to integrate their efforts is supremely necessary.

I don't know whether that has been done in Britain, as Mr. Churchill so passionately insists that it has been done. I only know that beyond the peradventure of doubt it has not been done here.

The spectre of an industrial pooh-bah overshadowing both their positions seems to haunt both of these gentlemen. In this country the example of Mr. B. M. Baruch as the assumed American pooh-bah seems to worry them both. Baruch never was a pooh-bah Hoover had food. Garfield had fuel. McAdoo had transportation and finance and so forth. Price fixing, while it was housed with Baruch's war industries board and the chief of that board, Brookings, also sat with the war industries board, was always an independent agency.

The secret throughout that great success was interlocking boards with every war agency represented on all the boards of other war agencies, but with each chairman in complete command subject only to appeal in case of conflict to the next higher board and a final appeal to the president. This sifted out 99 odd percent of complaints before they ever reached the president, prevented all absurd conflicts of action and centered and solidified the whole effort.

This column, with whatever reluctance, has anticipated and supported most of the authorities the president has asked. Many of the arguments for them were first advanced here—vast appropriations for mechanization, modernization and motorization of the army, selective service, extension of service, full authority for priorites and price ceilings

But it has not and cannot support the almost complete failure of a reasonable and rational coordination of effort and it is beginning to be convinced that the most of the whole sprawling organization of industrial effort has not produced and does not contain enough men of sufficient caliber to do their jobs and make the necessary combined effort.

This is not to advance any pooh-bah. To repeat, both Mr. Churchill and Mr. Roosevelt are right. God Almighty didn't make any self-evident pooh-bah for such a job as this.

But American industry in the main has found means by organization and administration to get along without pooh-bahs and it is about time that American government snapped out of its political paralysis and applied proved American methods to a very similar problem.

As it is, through inadequate inflation controls, all our people are threatened with great and unnecessary hardship, through inadequate conservation controls and ill-considered promises of supplies to other nations, little business is threatened with virtual extinction and through many other aspects of gross political mismanagement a great and growing resentment and unrest which threatens national unity is threatening our military solidarity and efficiency.

Wheeler Hints at New Political Party

WARNS SENATE TO 'WATCH FOR '44 ELECTION'

Claims Non-Interventionist Sentiment Will Be 'Spontaneous.'

By JOHN R. BEAL
(UP Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., predicted today that non-interventionist sentiment will crystalize "spontaneously" in a new political party in 1944, and hinted that he might bolt the Democrats to join it.

Wheeler, recognized as the leader of congressional opposition to President Roosevelt's foreign policy, refused to commit himself when asked by reporters whether he would lead such a party. He said that non-interventionist sentiment now is denied political expression in the two existing parties, but he felt that it is so great that it eventually will burst out and "sweep the country."

In a senate speech yesterday opposing the pending bill to retain selectees indefinitely, Wheeler hinted at this view when he warned Republicans and Democrats to "watch out for what will happen at the polls in the next election." He elaborated in an interview with the United Press.

"With the leaders of the Republican party and the Democratic party both favoring involvement in this war and action to tie up with European power politics every 25 years, the American voter cannot find a clean-cut issue," he said.

"If the two parties continue to stand together on such programs as union now, the League of Nations and close connection with Great Britain, a new party will arise that will sweep the country.

"It will be a party based on non-intervention and a sane, liberal economic program to save the United States from dictatorship and chaos. It will have with it the liberals in the Democratic and Republican parties.

"I am a Democrat and I want to go along with my party, but if Great Britain and the royal refugees are going to dictate the policies of the Republican and Democratic parties, then my choice is plain."

Wheeler believed the party would be along the lines of the 1924 Progressive coalition which resulted in the nomination of the late Sen. Robert M. LaFollette, sr., of Wisconsin for president and Wheeler for vice president. He said that it was unlikely the party would be created in 1942, an off-year politically, but that it has "an excellent prospect in 1944."

PRE-PAYMENT TAX NOTES GO ON SALE TODAY

Government Issues Paper For Advance Collection of Income Charges.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — The treasury today began collecting next year's record-breaking income taxes in advance by selling tax pre-payment notes to the general public.

President Roosevelt was expected to be the first customer, buying a $1,000 note in the official opening ceremonies.

Neither the president nor any other taxpayer knows what his 1941 bill will be, for congress is still working on the new income tax rates. However, every indication is that a large proportion of taxpayers will pay from 3 to 6 times as much next year as they would have this year on the same amount of income.

The new notes are of a type never marketed before by the federal government.

Secretary Morgenthau said the primary purpose was to offer them to taxpayers "for their convenience in setting aside regularly the funds which will be required to meet the unprecedented taxes they will pay next year on this year's income."

The notes were designed so that purchasers can turn them back to the treasury in payment of any income or excess profits taxes due after Jan. 1, 1942.

The treasury will accept none of the notes before that date. After that date the notes will be redeemed only if they have been held three months or more.

If anyone buys more than he needs next year for taxes, he can hold them for the following year, or turn them in for cash. If held, interest will be paid up to Aug. 1, 1943. If redemmed for cash, however, the treasury will refund only the purchase price, without interest.

The notes will bear the name of the purchaser and will not be transferable to or salable. Technically, they will be treated as part of the public debt until redeemed for either taxes or cash. They will be subject to all federal taxes and also state and local estate, gift or excise taxes, but not state or local income or property taxes.

The new notes will be of two types.

The "A" series for small taxpayers will be sold in units of $25, $50 and $100, and will bear 16 cents interest for every $100 for every month from the time purchased until turned in for taxes. The limit on the sale of these will be $1,200 per year per customer.

Bigger taxpayers can buy "B" notes in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000, $10,000 or $100,000. The interest on these will be 4 cents per $100 per month.

Patrolman C. W. Kyler found himself still at the receiving end of the line today as far as joshing about the marksmanship of his fellows on the pistol course is concerned. Kyler's buddy, Patrolman George F. Yoakam, who has always stood for a good deal of kidding from Kyler (rated as an expert shot) because he had never scored enough points for an expert rating, went out in the rain earlier this week and evened things up. Despite the handicap of a brisk shower Yoakam scored 95.6 points. This established an expert rating for Yoakam and made Kyler swallow his own words that "it was too rainy fo pistol practice."

Repentance or fear struck one Mansfield thief yesterday. Mrs. Pearl Robbins of 194 East First street, who reported to police Wednesday that a woman's wrist watch had been stolen from her home, yesterday called again to inform police that the wrist watch had been left in the mail box at her home. The watch, valued at about $20, was dropped into the box without being wrapped but Mrs. Robbins reported it was not damaged.

Three vegetable freaks, including a "hitch-hiking" cucumber had been brought to The News-Journal office today by county gardeners Grown by O. C. Stoner, Shiloh, R. D. 3, the freak cucumber is a well-formed but small pickle attached to the top of a large one, obtaining its nourishment from the big one. Two ears of sweet corn which resemble human hands with long fingers were brought to the office by Mrs. C. A. Robinson, Mansfield, R. D. 1.

An unidentified Mansfielder today claimed the unofficial record for driving without using the horn on his car. He had proof too. He said he has driven 1,500 miles in the past three months without footing his horn once. Reason: the horn was broken and wouldn't operate.

Even on these hot days, life in the cool waters of a lake isn't so much. In fact it can be downright precarious as any fish at Charles Mill reservoir well knows. A state creel census of the lake shows that between June 16 and 22, 1,288 Waltons caught 9,126 fish. That makes an average of 6.7 legal sized fish per fisherman.

OPM STUDIES LABOR DISPUTE

Hillman Invites Aluminum Workers To Washington For Conference.

(By Associated Press)

Demands of CIO aluminum workers for elimination of a sectional wage differential headed toward a Washington conference today.

After the Aluminum Company of America flatly rejected the demands last night at a meeting in Pittsburgh, N. A. Zonarich, union president, appealed to Sidney Hillman, associate director of the office of production management, to intervene in the dispute. Zonarich said Hillman had asked him and the union committee to come to Washington for talks.

The union leader declared that aluminum workers at Badin, N. C., and Alcoa, Tenn., as being paid from 2 to 18 per cent less than those at New Kensington, Pa., for the same type of work. The company said the management would "continue to pay the prevailing wage rate or better in any community in which its plants are located."

A CIO shipbuilders union at Jersey City, N. J., yesterday rejected a new working contract offered by the Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, Kearny, N. J., and the union's executive board issued a statement saying "it may be necessary to take a strike vote."

The union claims as members 14,000 of the 17,000 employes at the shipyard.

The AFL Electrical Workers Brotherhood, which is carrying out a citywide strike in New York City, ordered 285 union members to return to their jobs today at the Brooklyn navy yard where a $70,000,000 expansion program has been delayed by their absence. About 8,000 electricians remained on strike in all parts of the metropolis, in an effort to induce the Consolidated Edison company to employ 600 union members in the construction of a new powerhouse.

NEW LAW PROTECTS PENSION RIGHT OF STATE EMPLOYES

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Protection on the pension rights of state employes called up for military service was guaranteed under a new law effective today.

The statute, passed by the recent legislature, provides that the employes shall continue under provisions of the retirement system and need not contribute during their period of military service.

The act also provides that elective officials may become members of the retirement system, in the same manner as employes. A retired pensioner who is elected to office does not lose his rights to a pension after his term of office expires. He can not draw the pension, however, while serving in an elective office.

The law eliminates the secretary of the state teachers' retirement system from the board administering the state employes' retirement system. In the new five-member board, three will be elected. The state auditor and attorney general will continue as members.

Another law effective today requires all state boards and commissioners to file copies of all their orders with the secretary of state where they are to be open to public inspection. This is designed to eliminate necessity of going to each separate boards or commissions for copies of orders.

Special assessment and revenue bonds issued by the state or any political subdivisions are made negotiable instruments by an addition to the uniform bond act. This eliminates the possibility of any attack on their validity after the bonds have been issued and sold.

Also effective today is a law tightening regulations on the circulation of petitions for constitutional amendments and referenda on new laws.

Petition signers now may withdraw their names at any time before the secretary of state formally certifies the proposal for the ballot, and the secretary of state may disqualify even those signatures which have been verified by county election boards.

The law requires circulators to list their names with the secretary of state and to keep the petitions in their possession at all times. It further provides that the tax commissioner's estimates of revenue to be raised by tax amendments be mailed to voters with official arguments by opponents and proponents.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Manhattan Nights.

ON Broadway the metamorphosis of the Glamor Girl—as an individual and as a class—is always an interesting phenomenon, one to the contemplation of which the imagination leaps eagerly. The study of the glamor girl by the masses started, I suppose, with the Florodoras, and gained momentum with Ziegfeld and his collection of fabulous beauties.

Dorothy Kilgallen

Our own era has been punctuated less with colorful showgirls than with colorful models—the Powers, and the Conover. They seem to hold the spotlight against the competition of chorus girls and debs.

In fact, the situation has reached a point where the more vivid figures around the Stork club and Monte Carlo—figuratively and literally—are the magazine cover girls.

They flit to Hollywood and they marry millionaires, they hold hands with movie idols and gather in reams of coin for Bundles from Britain.

The public gets to know their names the way they know Dorothy Lamour's . . . Dana Dale . . . Ann Graham . . . Georgia Carroll . . . Dusty Anderson . . . Jinx Falkenberg . . . Beverly Barbisch.

Now the model has grown more and more professional in her methods of rising from the status of an anonymous girl who has her picture taken to that of a girl whose name is in all the Broadway columns, and a few of the society notes.

I am reminded of this when I am informed that the Kansas censors were on the verge of banning a new magazine called Beauty Parade (in which quite a bit of Broadway money has been invested) because the photographs contained therein struck the blue-noses as too "theatrical" for Kansas consumption.

However, the magazine was saved for the news stands of that state when the gentlemen involved discovered that Patricia Garfield's picture was in it, and that she was billed as "New York's top model." Miss Garfield comes from Wichita.

Miss Garfield is also an example of what I mean. Two years ago, I wrote the first line about her ever to appear in a New York newspaper. I did not know then, myself, who she was

I merely recorded that she had walked into the Kit Kat club early one morning and a dozen of the local boys had gone immediately to great lengths to learn who she was and at what telephone number she might be reached.

She started fads for couturiers who wanted fads started; there was, for instance, the evening she strolled into the Barberry Room wearing a coat made entirely of pale pink chicken feathers which shed as she walked, and there was another occasion on which she blossomed forth in an exotic hat scented with perfume reputed to cost $100 an ounce.

And now, another big step in the metomorphosis. Just like any big star of the stage or cinema, Miss Garfield has engaged a press agent.

Face Six-Month Workhouse Terms For 'Act of Love'

DAYTON — (U.P.)— Three members of a religious sect, convicted of an "act of love" assault on Merlin Hulse, 21, to drive a "demon" out of his body, today faced six-month terms in the Dayton workhouse.

Found guilty of a charge that they had beaten Hulse were Mrs. Ethel Redding, founder of the Church of God which is the Hope Gospel; her son, Rolland Redding, a member of the sect, and Robert Leonard, a charter member of the church.

The sentences of Rolland Redding and Leonard were so worded by Magistrate Paul Sherer that they would be able to work at their jobs during the day but would spend the rest of the time at the workhouse.

"We go not to pay repentance for a crime," said Mrs. Redding, "we go for the soul of Merlin Hulse."

Robert Leonard told the court that he was among those who held Hulse on the floor of the Redding home on July 2 in an attempt to make him "pray that he might cast out the demon from his soul."

A physician testified earlier that he had found Hulse tied in a bed with blood flowing from his mouth.

Bright Color Note For Hats Is Advised

Important note emphasized by one of the leading milliners: With a bright color note in the hat, let it be bright and dramatic—let it be a striking note to focus full attention upon the face—and let there be no other distracting note of color Even if the vivid color note in the costume isn't the hat—still let there be just one brilliant color note in the entire costume, this famous designer advises

And if a woman loves color—but doesn't have the courage—there's still a way out—or in! Her wildest color dream may be realized in the linings of her hats That's a new to-do bigger and brighter than ever before Several of the leading designers are introducing the splashiest splashes of color in hat linings.

Another conspicuous note among all the collections is that of security-to-the-head Designers have become aware of the annoyance a-hat-that-doesn't-stay-on can create, and have practically outdone themselves to make hats secure to the head Some have combs at the front, or the sides, to hold them on But mostly they are made so that they are hats again—they cover the head snugly—and that's what keeps them on Back interest is extremely important Square backs and pointed backs distinguish some of the smaller shapes and as for the larger-brimmed hats—the brims do all manner of things dipping up and down, sweeping out and around, but always there is a good deep-fitting crown to hold the hat on the head

Duchess Chooses Wardrobe

By AMY PORTER

The Duchess of Windsor has four new costumes, the first important additions to her wardrobe since she and the Duke left Paris almost a year ago.

She said when she bought them, "These should carry me through the summer."

And they should, because they are selected to meet all the clothes requirements in the simple life the Duchess now leads in Nassau. A white shantung suit, a formal crepe dress, two sheer cotton evening frocks—a simple summer wardrobe

The Duke helped her shop for them at Hattie Carnegie's in Palm Beach during their visit there. They strolled into the shop, arriving unannounced and unattended Within a few minutes a crowd gathered The manager had to lock the front door

The Duke and Duchess smiled at all the fuss, and sat down to look at clothes, while women on the street outside pounded the plate glass windows with their rings, begging for admission.

'Not For Me.'

The Duchess was eager to see everything, because, she said, "This is the 'first collection I've seen since I left Paris." She looked at the new sloped shoulder, but protested "They're not for me. I don't like them I like some padding in the shoulder, but not enough to make me look like Jack Dempsey."

She looked at circular-skirted day frocks, but said, "I never wear full skirts except in evening things."

The Duke admired a red-and-white candy-striped jersey evening costume, bordered in sequins. His lady agreed, "It's divine, but my wardrobe isn't large enough to justify buying anything so conspicuous"

The salesgirl brought out hats.

"I'll try them on if it'll make you happy," said the Duchess, "but you know I never wear anything but beanies"

The four costumes she finally settled on would serve as the basis for almost any woman's summer wardrobe.

Favorite Fabric.

First, a cool summer suit Shantung, because it is one of her favorite fabrics. White, because white is cool The single-breasted jacket ends just at the hipbone. The Duches realizes that her small stature—she wears size 10—makes long jackets unbecoming to her. The skirt is straight, with slight front fullness With the suit, she ordered a shantung shirt in navy.

The formal day dress is of a strawberry-printed white crepe, with a high neckline, three-quarter length sleeves. Puffy bishop-sleeve cuffs and tiny collar are of embroidered organdie

One evening dress of sheer white embroidered with red silk dots, has short sleeves and a high neck finished with a bow. The other, of white organdie printed with blue flowers is more elaborately trimmed with scrolls of blue lace and a sash of narrow blue velvet ribbon

All four costumes are typically Duchess of Windsor—simple of line, with feminine detail.

She'll have matching beanies made up for the two day costumes, and wear them, as always, pinned back of her pompadour with two beautiful diamond clips

Enhance Your Natural Beauty With Make-Up

By MAX FACTOR, JR.
Hollywood Make-up Specialist Writing for INS.

HOLLYWOOD— (INS)—Make-up is primarily and most importantly designed to enhance naturally beautiful features

Secondarily, the powers of concealment and illusion contained in artfully applied make-up can be devoted to concealing or minimizing the apparency of appearance flaws.

The secondary fact, however, should not be construed as one which signifies that women should always depend upon make-up alone to accomplish the overcoming of imperfections in appearance.

If it is at all possible, a woman should go behind the makeup scene to actually and physically banish the flaw about which she is concerned.

Let us consider, for instance, skin which is marred by blackheads, or any comparable defect.

Make-up can conceal the presence of such a defect. But, obviously enough, it would be very foolish to go on depending upon such make-up concealment for your final perfection in appearance. The sensible thing to do is to take steps to remedy the basic skin flaw, rather than to merely go on hiding it

Do Something For Girls Who are Away

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The revolting murder a short time ago of a War Department girl, 23 years old, by a maniac, has shaken the national capital to its foundation, and called for more adequate police protection. The killing of Betty Strieff is the sixth unsolved murder of young women in Washington, all of whom had been violated and strangled.

Mrs. Roosevelt, when the murder was mentioned at a press conference, stated that the number of unsolved murders should make the police get what funds they require to augment their force. At the same time she warned girls to be careful with whom they go out, and not to go out at all with people they don't know and never saw before.

The First Lady made the further suggestion: "If a girl drinks at all, she should be extremely careful, and it's wise never, never to take even one drink in a group or with individuals you don't know all about." She repeated, "And I mean one drink, too."

Mrs. Roosevelt's suggestions regarding drinking had no bearing whatever on Washington's latest case. Miss Strieff had gone to a delicatessen store, was overtaken by a cloudburst and may have sought momentary refuge in a doorway or a car.

These six unsolved murder mysteries involving young girls should make every girl realize that conditions in Washington, at present called "Boom Town," are vastly different from conditions at home. The national capital is flooded with job-seekers of all classes. Many of these people come with little more money than enough to keep themselves going for a time. a job is not forthcoming, some resort to panhandling. Not all are normal. In addition to this, Washington has its own submerged class.

Girls coming from small towns and rural districts where everyone knows everyone else are apt to be trustful. The offer of a lift in a car does not seem very different from such an offer back home. Away from home, not only in Washington, but in every city and country, are desperately lonely girls. Street after street and never a familiar face. Everyone seems to be going places, out for a good time. Everyone but the girl who doesn't know a soul. And the young man who has offered her a lift looks all right; why be so prudish as to turn him down?

Hundreds of letters have come to this column from all over the United States from girls tragically lonesome in strange cities. For this reason I've urged churches to take up the good work of giving girls some sort of home background.

More necessary to a church than a new organ, to my way of thinking, is that some sort of community room be managed, a room where girls could meet their friends, cook a meal, see a movie, play games, sing, dance, or put on plays. Some older woman with a social sense could be on hand as hostess to introduce and make everyone feel at home.

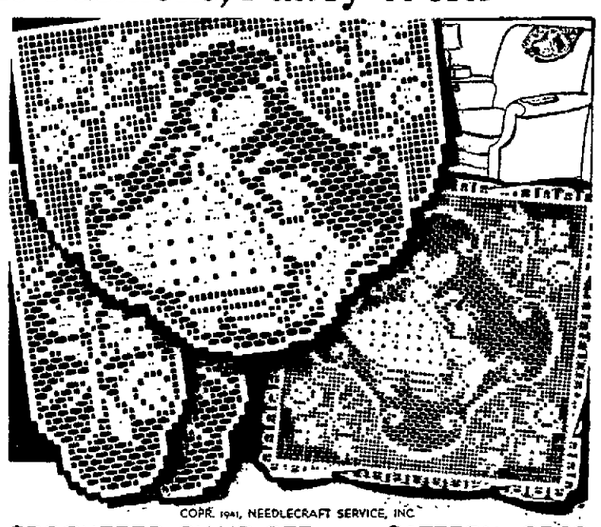

While this type of thing has not the glamor of missionary work, it is certainly more earnestly needed.

The lovely young native girl with vine leaves in her hair may seem tremendously worthwhile as convert material. But how about our American girls, away from home, open to all sorts of temptations? Surely, these girls must be saved not only from criminals but from loneliness, discouragement and from their own trustfulness.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

If I had been dealing with any adversary of my own kind, who "spoke my language," I should have scorned to use the subterfuge which I had just employed against Stephen Redfield.

For I was perfectly safe in tacitly promising him that I would not repeat his queries to me, or say that he had made them. Within easy earshot Mary and Philip Veritzen, stationed in the adjoining suite with the door ajar, were listening avidly. I knew, to every word of our colloquy.

I had not the slightest pang of conscience for my deception. Nancy Carew's revelation had definitely placed Stephen Redfield in the category of people under suspicion of helping subversive elements against the government.

Wants To Verify Suspicion.

Of one thing our interview so far had made me certain. Stephen Redfield might be cloaking sinister activities with his profession, but he was only a minor cog in the machine. However, even the small parts of a mechanism are necessary to its existence, I reflected, and it was especially important that I discover, if possible, what was the connection, which I suspected between the actor and the young gangster who so strongly resembled him, and who had made the murderous attempt to get from me Marion's letter to Ronald.

There was a connection, I was sure, and to find it I was willing to put up with Stephen Redfield's questioning, although every fibre within me yearned to show him the door summarily.

Asks About Jack Bickett.

And then the answer came, swiftly, as if torn from his throat against his saner judgment. Taking only my tacit promise not to tell anyone of his questions as insurance against discovery, he put the question squarely.

"Have you any idea where I can get in touch with Jack Bickett?"

I stared at him, with all my faculties fused in involuntary defense. For here was something which definitely linked this man with the mysterious affair of Marion's disappearance.

Again I was hearing Marion's drained, dispirited voice asking this same question of me over the telephone, from Mrs. Ticer's home, the day we first heard from frantic Lillian of her idolized daughter's departure from college, with all its sinister implications.

Marion had then made my silence as to her whereabouts a condition of her giving me a message to her mother. I had agreed to keep silent because I knew in what awful terror Lillian was living. And after Marion had begged me to assure her mother of her safety, she had asked me abruptly if I knew anything of Jack Bickett, or where he could be found.

The two questions must be connected, I told myself. There could not be two separate inquiries for my brother-cousin, who was Katherine's husband and who for years had been deep in the wilds of South America, engaged in work of so secret and mysterious a character that we of his family had never understood just what he was doing.

Gives Redfield An Answer.

That he was breaking Katherine's heart, and making an arid waste of her life, we understood only too well, and our anger against him was tempered only because of our knowledge that injuries received in the World war had sadly altered a nature once high-minded, generous, sunny and tender.

I knew that I must give Stephen Redfield an answer to his question. He was waiting for it. But from his standpoint it would be a most unsatisfactory one. For my own part I was glad that I could truthfully say only what I was about to tell him, for I was sure that the queries concerning Jack Bickett's whereabouts boded evil for my brother-cousin.

"I have no idea where Jack Bickett is," I told him steadily. "Since you have asked this question of me, you no doubt know that he is a distant relative of mine, and that his wife lives in our home. But she knows no more of him than we do. She has not heard from him in months. The last we knew he was in South America. He probably is still there."

"And then, again, he may not be," Stephen Redfield said.

Touch-Me-Not Skins Are Problem

By MME. QUI VIVE

There are skins that belong to the touch-me-not type. The poor dears who are afflicted with them never know when they're going to kick up a fuss, get red, feel irritated, fight off makeup. Well, there's one consolation; there's nothing quite so nice to brag about as a sensitive complexion. It sort of sets one apart from the crowd that isn't bothered about such matters.

These unruly facial overcoats have different ways of expressing tantrums. Some of them get smart and sore when they come in contact with soap; they are usually excessively dry, subject to a mild dermatitis. Others blaze up when even the blandest creams are used, a condition that is accounted for by an allergic tendency. Still others get disorderly when brushed by a harsh, cold wind. They feel starched and drawn.

Blondes, more than brunettes, are inclined to have complexion that are whimsical, the cutaneous fabric being thinner and more delicate. The beauty overhead of the fair-haired sister is heavier than that of the dark-tressed baby, her hair as well as her complexion requiring more attention. The color of the skin as well as the hair is likely to change as the birthdays increase in number.

The girl whose digestion has finicky notions is likely to have a finicky skin. Queer little blotches appear whenever the tummy is upset or the intestinal tract sluggish. She is also subject to cold sores, a single one of which will put a modern Helen of Troy out of the beauty picture.

When the facial surface balks at contact with soap, another brand should be tried. All soaps do not agree with all skins. There is a way of getting around this difficulty. Soap is an excellent cosmetic; if possible it should be used. Remove makeup with a cleasing cream, let it remain on, dip a large washcloth in warm soapy water, press close to the flesh, move it about lightly. Cream and suds form a soothing combination. Rinse with tepid water, dry gently, use cream again, wiping it away with tissues before putting on makeup.

Women are inclined to believe that cosmetics are at the root of all skin flare-ups. That is not always the case. Some patricular food may have been consumed to which the skin and digestive organs both make objection. Cosmetic chemists are smart and watchful. They are not out for destroying good looks or receiving complaints from distressed customers. Then, too, the law is poking it official nose into the compounding of beautifiers; formulas must be registered.

At this season of the year, more than at any other time, it is necessary to keep the epidermal surface lubricated.

HOROSCOPE

For Saturday, August 2.

EXCEPTIONALLY propitious astral forces are found to dominate on this day, holding promise for all sorts of advancements, favors, honors, public acclaim. It should be a time for pushing to the goal of heart's desire, in both public and private ambitions, and with financial expansion, social popularity, public friendship and prestige assured.

Those whose birthday it is may hit the high mark of achievement, preferment, expansion and growth in whatever direction the forces of talent, desire and inclination may lead. This in business, cultural, social, public and financial aspiration, with the assistance and friendly recognition of those in high places to be counted upon. The elements of "luck" as well as pluck and personal prestige are considerable and to be utilized if not carried to excess.

A child born on this day should be not only assisted and elevated by Lady Luck, but its cherished hopes and wishes may be spurred by efficiency, sound character and logical ambitions.

Boys Make Gardening Hobby Pay

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

While Mrs. Myers and I were lecturing in Madison, Wisconsin, some while ago, Mrs. Elizabeth Hart Huffer, wife of a professor of astronomy at the University of Wisconsin, told me how she and her husband have been educating their boys in the use of money. I prevailed upon her to write it out for me and let me use her name. To quote:

"My husband and I worked out the following plan four years ago: We agreed to furnish food and clothing, pay doctor bills, and provide musical instruments and music lessons. But any other wants must be satisfied by the money which the boys make through their own efforts. These include shows, presents, hobbies, all kind of sports equipment from baseballs, footballs, skates and swimming suits, to sailing lessons. Our aim was to set up a plan wherein money is definitely connected with effort. . . .

"They earn their money by mowing lawns and performing certain household tasks. Last year we hit on another source of income which has proved successful from many angles. We rented a garden plot at the edge of town. I agreed to help, but the boys, whose ages were six and ten years, staked out the rows, put up poles for the beans, sowed all the seed, and did the heavy cultivating. I worked along at the less spectacular jobs like weeding by hand and hoeing. They did some weeding, too, but the results were not so good. Before summer vacation began we worked in the garden either after school or after supper, which meant that the neighborhood was minus two ball players part of the time

Profitable Garden.

"When the vegetables were ready to use, I bought them, paying about one-half to two-thirds of the current market price. The older boy kept an account of every item in his own notebook, which I checked, of course. He made about $14.00.

"The news of our garden project spread, and a few neighbors asked to buy our 'surplus commodities.' Of course we had the pleasure of giving everyone on our side of the block something from our garden, too. We had disappointments. Rabbits nibbled off every one of our young beet leaves. But on the whole, our garden was a success. We consulted our county agent and bought selected strains of varieties best adapted to the home garden and not the truck garden, with the result that we had vegetables of a very superior flavor.

Young Business Men.

"In selling the vegetables, I insisted on the children offering the very best, and they could not annoy people by going from door to door. We tried to build up our number of customers as a professional man builds up his clientele. . . .

"The project has been so successful, however, that we are making more ambitious plans for our garden next year."

This was the memorable hand which is recalled poignantly by its victim years after it came up at the national championships of the American Contract Bridge league in the great Convention hall at Asbury Park, N. J. It was reconstructed by him the other day for us as he thought about entering in the 1941 national championships which begin here next Monday, Aug. 4, and last all week, with play for mixed pairs, men's and women's pairs, the Masters' Pairs world championship and the Masters' world team championship.

He is a player who boasts that he has held a few real "Yarboroughs" in his time — hands without a single honor — and that he always made a bid on them as a matter of superstition. This time his hunch was to try to keep the probably strong opponents out of a game. If he had passed on his second turn, he would have been set seven tricks doubled, for a score of only 1,300 points for his vulnerable opponents, who otherwise could easily have bid 6-No Trumps to make 1,470 points with an overtrick, and might have bid 7-No Trumps to score 2,200 points. It would have given him top score on the deal.

But he lost his nerve when East made his business, or penalty, pass, and redoubled — an S. O. S. redouble — to ask his partner to take him out. North did not understand the meaning of this and passed So, when the defenders took all the tricks they scored 2,600 points for a top score, giving the unhappy victim bottom score.

Sport Podge by REX HESS

Jawin' Jawn Allen, the old Cleveland Indian slider slinger and bad lad, who has been languishing in hot and all too sunny Saint Looey, doing bullpen service with Luke Sewell's Browns, has escaped the chore of displaying his ancient stuff to the baseball fans of Galion, Ohio.

Allen had been announced as the starting hurler for the Browns in their Galion engagement with the Ohio State league Fremont Green Sox Monday night, and his picture had already appeared in the Galion paper as the guy who would toe the twirler's tee in this nocturnal affair.

But the guy who once sold his undershirt to Alva Bradley for 500 leaves of Uncle Sam's best spending lettuce, will not be seen throwing his open-date fill-in remnants in Galion's Heise park yet awhile.

* * *

Larry the Red MacPhail, who once tried to capture the kaiser, and thus developed a penchant for collecting odds and ends of this world's strange characters, even to taking over the management of those beloved bums, the Brooklyn Dodgers, rescued Jawn from the unhappy assignment of working in the Crawford county bushes on his day off.

When Allen was still a good pitcher with Cleveland, he always shunned exhibition trips. To work in an exhibition game would have put an everlasting blight on his temperamental soul.

But the Dodgers have purchased Jawn from the Browns for an "undisclosed" amount of cash, which probably wasn't a great deal more than the price Jawn once charged for an undershirt.

Said Larry the Red to Jawin' Jawn: "Welcome to Flatbush, son. A shirt salesman with your temper and temperament is just what this happy family of Daffiness Boys needs."

* * *

What actually motivated the MacPhail, of course, was the urgent need of additional hurling strength for his slipping Dodgers. And remembering his past success in turning fading American league veterans into successful National loop rookies, he undoubtedly thought:

"What can I lose? Maybe old man Allen can win a few games for me. And I need a few games."

There was no philanthropic motive in the Redhead's rescue of the Jawin' one from the Galion mound.

We can all be glad this didn't happen at our aluminum pots and pans night at the Fairground home of the Braves.

When Mrs. George Rody returned to her auto after witnessing a pots and pans game at Shreveport, La., she found two aluminum hub caps missing from her car.

Pieces of the metal furnished free admission to the game. Said Mrs. Rody:

* * *

"I'm patriotic, but here is the rub,
Someone got in on the cap of my hub."

LYNN WALDORF TO SERVE ON ALL-STARS STAFF

CHICAGO —(U.P.)— Lynn Waldorf, head football coach at Northwestern university, today accepted an invitation to serve on the coaching staff of the college all-stars who play the professional champion Chicago Bears Aug. 28.

Four other coaches, another from the midwest and one each from the east, south and far west, will be selected. One will be named head coach.

FASTER AND FASTER

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—A few years ago it was thought impossible for a human to run 400 meters in 47 seconds. But, in the AAU championships the other day, Grover Klemmer of California U. not only set a world record of 46 seconds but the first six finishers were clocked in better than 47 seconds.

Tribe Looks for New Talent

Eyes Eastern League Right-Hander.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—No one is denying that Cleveland's Indians could use a little more fancy talent as the Tribe moves into the city of brotherly love for a three-game clash with the first-division Athletics.

* * *

General Manager C. C. Slapnicka admits the Indians are casting longing glances at Charles (Red) Embree, a right-hander who is helping the Wilkesbarre, Pa., farm lead the Eastern league, with his 16 wins and only two defeats.

Having won only two of the eight games in its eastern swing, the Tribe faces tomorrow a team which is in the groove. The A's climbed into the first division yesterday by knocking the White Sox out of fourth place.

It was a break for the Indians that their final game with Washington was called off yesterday because of threatening weather and wet grounds, for Lou Boudreau was suffering from a leg injury and would have been out of the lineup.

The Brooklyn Dodgers may have their shortcomings, but they aren't lacking in determination.

They were backed up against the wall yesterday, tottering, ready for a kill by St. Louis, but they bounced back with a 15-hit assault, including three home runs, to trounce the Cardinals, 9-5.

This left the National league race in the same chaotic state as when the two rivals first came together Tuesday. The Redbirds still have a two-game lead.

The series was as explosive and dramatic as any the season has spawned, and the finale matched the two previous tussles. Dolph Camilli hit his 19th home run and Lew Riggs smacked his third to pelt Harry Gumbert from the mound in the second inning. The Cards came back to drive out Whitlow Wyatt in the third and tie the score.

Then the Dodgers put victory out of reach of St. Louis with a four-run fourth inning centering around Jim Wasdell's home run with two on.

The New York Yankees took a tighter grip on the American league lead, meanwhile, by sweeping a double-header from the Detroit Tigers, 6-3 and 5-0. Darkness curtailed the second session to eight innings. Joe DiMaggio connected for a single in the opener and a single and his 25th homer with two on in the nightcap to extend his new hitting streak to 14 contests. This made 70 out of 71 for him.

The speeding Philadelphia Athletics crushed the Chicago White Sox, 9-2, to take over fourth place, with Benny McCoy's grand-slam homer in the fourth providing the impetus. It was the first time in years the A's had been in the first division at this late date.

The Boston Red Sox divided a double-header with the St. Louis Browns. The first affair was a wild hitting demonstration with each team getting 14 safeties and St. Louis winning, 16-11. Tex Hughson pitched six-hit ball to give Boston the nightcap, 4-1.

In the National league, the Cincinnati Reds nipped the New York Giants, 6-5, on Chuck Aleno's pinch-single with the bases loaded in the ninth inning, scoring two runs.

Pittsburgh managed to keep right behind by nosing out the Boston Braves, 9-8, in a free-hitting spectacle. The Phillies crushed the Chicago Cubs again, 7-2.

ALEXANDER RELEASED FROM HOSPITAL

NEW YORK —(U.P.)— Grover Cleveland Alexander, former National league pitching star, was back at home today following his release from Bellevue hospital where he had been confined with a head injury suffered last week.

Mrs. Alexander, who brought her husband home from the hospital, said that he was feeling "much better" but would have to remain in bed for several days.

SLIDE INJURIES KEEP PASSEAU INACTIVE

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Pitcher Claude Passeau probably will remain on the injured list for another 10 days, the Chicago Cubs learned today.

Physicians said that new X-rays showed Passeau had suffered a broken rib as well as damaged tissue when he slid into second base during last Saturday's game with the Giants.

NO FAMILY ROW

BINGHAMTON, N. Y.—(AP)—Ray Pinelli won't have to worry about Papa calling a close one against him. Ray, fresh out of Notre Dame, is playing baseball with Binghamton, a New York Yankee farm club. So, when and if Ray goes to the majors he'll probably do his playing in the American league. Papa Babe Pinelli is a National league umpire.

LOTSA FANS

BROOKLYN—(AP)—Pete Reiser, star Brooklyn rookie outfielder and hitter, can round up a good sized cheering section by just inviting his brothers and sister to the park. Pete has five sisters and two brothers.

Goes to Dodgers

For years a major league star with the Yanks and the Indians, Johnny Allen, late of the St. Louis Browns, now is wearing a uniform of the Brooklyn Dodgers. Allen was acquired for the waiver price of $7,500.

Dodgers Get New Helpers

Allen, Tatum, and Drake Report to Flatbush Club.

NEW YORK — (U.P.) — Manager Leo Durocher's cries for help for the staggering Brooklyn Dodgers were answered today and three new players reported to the Flatbush forces in Chicago. They were Johnny Allen, 36-year old right-hander waived out of the American league; Tom Tatum, right-handed hitting outfielder, and Tom Drake, righthanded pitcher. Tatum and Drake come from the Nashville Southern Association club.

What help Allen, Tatum and Drake may be for the Dodgers, who've lost six out of nine on their western trip and slumped from a 4-game lead to tail two games behind the Cardinals in 16 days, remains to be seen.

Allen, bought from the Browns for a reported $10,000, will soon get his chance to give the herky-jerky Dodger pitching staff some help. He pitches against the Cubs today. As for Tatum and Drake, they can't do much worse than some other Dodgers have been doing lately.

In the last 11 games Durocher has used 35 pitchers, an averagee of more than three per game. Not a single Dodger pitcher has gone the route and won since Luke Hamlin beat the Cubs July 15. Whit Wyatt has failed in his last four starts and Kirby Higbe in his last three. These are the two guys who were supposed to pitch Brooklyn to the pennant.

Tatum, who's 23, is hitting .365 and leads the Southern loop in stolen bases with 25. He formerly belonged to the Tigers but was cut adrift by Commissioner Landis in the wholesale purge of Detroit farm hands in 1939. Drake, who's won 10 and lost four, has had previous trials with the Indians.

BOOK RETURN TILT

Port Clinton Merchant's softball team will play a return engagement with the Town Taverns at North Lake park, Sunday. The Tavern's set the Merchant's down 5-1 in a game at Port Clinton last week.

Cards Will Win Pennant

Billy Says Injury Jinx Only Bar To Club's Hopes.

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—If the Cardinals can dodge the injury jinx the rest of the season the club will win the National league pennant, says Manager Billy Southworth.

The team entered the Brooklyn series, which they split to retain their two game lead, with the lineup at full strength for the first time since opening day when Catcher Gus Mancuso was removed with a badly bruised and sprained finger.

"Barring further injuries the Cardinals will win the pennant," Southworth asserted. "It is only because of excellent replacements, and because we've really played to win, that the club has stayed on top this long."

Mancuso went out at just the time his experience behind the plate was necessary to balance the roster of young hurlers carried by the club. He was out 11 days.

Before Gus could get back in action, Pitcher Clyde Shoun, veteran workhorse of whom much was expected, jammed his ankle sliding into third base and he limped on the sidelines until May 15. Since then Shoun has been pounded from the box more times than the club would like to remember.

Then Enos Slaughter, who wields a wicked bat, reported to the team's physician for treatment of an ailment that has caused his removal off and on since the start of the season.

Walker Cooper, brilliant rookie catcher, was the next victim.

He was in a collision at the plate May 18 and came out second best with a broken shoulder blade. Cooper didn't get back into armor until July 13.

May 25, slugger Johnny Mize and Second Baseman Frank Crespi each fractured a finger.

Crespi was back seven days later; Mize was out for almost a month but before he returned Third Baseman Jimmy Brown, sparkplug of the infield, went out with a broken hand. Brown's injury, which occurred June 11, kept him off the diamond until July 10.

The next victim was Morton Cooper, pitching mainstay. He was removed June 18 from an elbow operation. July 27 marked his return.

On July 21 Don Padgett, utility outfielder, catcher and hitter deluxe, checked out with tonsilitis.

Captain Terry Moore, outfielder, joined the ranks of the injured July 19 with a sprained shoulder.

So now you can understand why Southworth considers a pennant a cinch for his Cardinals, barring further injuries.

HEART ATTACK TAKES EX-INDIAN COACH

MONACA, Pa. —(AP)— Howard Shanks, 51, who started a long baseball career with East Liverpool and Youngstown in the Ohio-Pennsylvania league, is dead of a heart attack. He coached the Cleveland Indians from 1929 to 1932 after playing outfield and third base for the Washington Senators and Boston Red Sox. He managed the Beaver Falls Bees in the Penn State association three years ago. The funeral will be Friday.

Appear Here With Monarchs

HILTON SMITH

JOHN O'NEIL

These two regular members of the world champion colored baseball team, the Kansas City Monarchs, will be seen in action Monday night at the Fairground when the Monarchs tangle with a strengthened Liberty Park team. Smith probably will take over the mound work after the famous Satchel Paige has done his stint of several innings, while Bucky O'Neil will be cavorting at first base.

* * * * *

Atton Busy Strengthening Liberty Park's Lineup

On Monday night at 8:30 in the Mansfield Ohio State league park, the highly publicized Satchel Paige, greatest colored baseball player of all times and one of the outstanding pitchers of this generation, either colored or white, may be the feature attraction as the world famed Kansas City Monarchs cross bats with the local Liberty Parks, but Manager Joe Atton of the hometown team promises to put a line-up on the field which will give even the talented Satchelfoot something to think about.

* * *

While Atton has not definitely decided upon his entire line-up, he has revealed that Jim "Red" LeMunyon, former Ohio University athlete, and Freddie Lewis, an outfielder who formerly cavorted with the Lima Pandas of the Ohio State league, will be two of the flychasers.

Bob Boyd, a sure fire defensive star, will be at shortstop, while a pair of Junior Legion lads, Third Sacker Pete Campbell and Keystone Artist Pete Moritz will be making their debut in fast company.

Atton has not decided definitely who will start at first base. Joe himself will direct the Liberty Parks from his position behind the stick. Atton has several other players in mind from nearby towns and will probably reveal his line-up by Monday morning. Just who will start on the mound for the locals is a deep-dark secret thus far, but it is a certainty that an established pitcher will be here to face the Monarchs.

* * *

There is no question regarding the Monarch line-up. Every member of the regular team will start the game and will finish it with the exception of the battery men. That is the policy of the Kansas City Monarch management which believes that the public pays to see the best they have to offer, even though the game be only an exhibition.

This will give the fans a good chance to look at that power-busting outfield of Willard Brown, Ted Strong and Billy Sims. It will enable them to compare the Monarch infield of Bucky O'Neill at first, Rainey Bibbs second, Newt Allen short, and Jimmy Williams third, with major league outfits they have seen.

Jimmy Williams has one of the finest arms in baseball and fans are urged to come early and watch the Monarchs put on their justly famous infield workout. No major league infield could look better. Behind the platter will be Steel Arm Green, who can really peg that ball to second and knows what a baseball bat was made for.

The gates will open at 6:30 and fans have been assured that capable umpires will be imported for the occasion.

Popular prices will prevail.

Fans Pay to Watch Rain

Thirty-Four Baseball Customers Convinced.

Thirty-four faithful and optimistic baseball fans paid their way into the Fairground ball park last evening to watch the rain. The rest of Mansfield knew it was raining, but the 34 had to be convinced.

* * *

And they waited patiently until 8:15 when Umpire Ward informed them that it really was raining and the Braves and Findlay Oilers would not perform that night.

They have their rain checks today to prove that it actually did rain.

The wet stuff began to fall in copious quantities about 7 o'clock but it slackened off shortly after eight, and the diamond was still in playing condition.

But the rain turned into a steady drizzle and Ward ruled against and pastimeing for the evening.

It seems it always rains when Findlay comes to town, at least it has on three occasions, but Grover Hartley's Rainmakers got into a real storm at Shelby where they stopped for lunch. It was raining so hard they couldn't get back to their bus for 25 minutes.

The Braves go to Tiffin tonight and meet the Mud Hens here tomorrow night, following that tilt up with a Sunday game at the Fairground with Lima.

BRIGHT LIGHTS CHEER VILLAGE OF GOLD FAME

California Community Ends Era of Flashlights and Lanterns.

GEORGETOWN, Cal.—(U.P.)—Georgetown, historic gold mining center in El Dorado county, Cal., has just installed its first electric lights—in fact, its first street lights of any kind except for four gasoline lamps that were tried unsuccessfully about 30 years ago.

For years, Georgetown residents have been stumbling through the night with lanterns and flashlights. In 1910, they installed gasoline lights but the disadvantages were too great, and they were abandoned after five years.

The gasoline lights presented a whole series of problems. The persons in the home nearest the light had to maintain and operate it. This involved lowering it from the pole in the evening, cleaning and filing it, lighting it, rehoisting it for a few hours and then lowering it again for extinguishing.

The citizens found the moon just as satisfactory and a whole lot easier, so the lamps weren't used on the nights when a moon was scheduled to be shining. After five years, it got to be just too much trouble.

The premiere of the new 27 street lamps and clock device that automatically turns them on and off was a great affair with the whole community participating. County and Pacific Gas & Electric Co. officials made commemorative speeches, a high school band from neighboring Placerville played, and there was a parade of lantern-carrying citizens who were not at all nostalgic when the lights were turned on.

From a city in the early '60s with a population of 2,000 persons and about 10,000 in the surrounding area, Georgetown began to slip in 1884, when hydraulic mining was stopped and by 1919, it virtually was a ghost town. Its several hotels and theater featuring "boxes and plush seats" were empty frames.

But in 1928 Georgetown got its first electricity of any kind and thus started its comeback. Now there are 600 residents and 2,000 in the district. With the 27 new street lights, there's no telling when Georgetown will stop growing.

Books For Children

(Available at Mansfield Public Library)

The story of a little Mexican boy who was determined that he would not learn to read is told by Elizabeth Tarshish in "The Village That Learned To Read," now available at the Mansfield Public library.

Exciting adventures of three boys are followed in "Piang, the Moro Chieftain," by Florence Stuart.

THE VILLAGE THAT LEARNED TO READ—Elizabeth Tarshish. Pedro was determined that he would not learn to read. The government had built a new school in the village and all the other children had learned to read and write except Pedro. At last he decided ed to run away to Mexico City to become a bull fighter. Then something happened that made him wish he had learned to read too.

PIANG, THE MORO CHIEFTAIN — Florence Stuart. — On Piang's fourteenth birthday the chief of his village proclaimed that he and two companions had become men. They were then given one year to prove it. They were sent into the jungle to live for that time, and if they failed to learn enough from the jungle during the year they would be returned to the women's quarters until another birthday. Piang's companions were Tolowee, a brave but small boy of the same age, and Buldoon, a giant size simpleton full of mischief.

TAX SPURT NETS GAIN IN COUNTY

Sales Tax Receipts 82 Per Cent Above Same Period In 1940.

A spurt in Richland county sales tax receipts for the third week of July gave the county an 82 percent gain over the corresponding week last year, the state treasurer's report showed today.

Collections for the week amounted to $13,766. For the same week last year they totaled $7,541.

The week's tax "take" brought the total for this year to $396,622 for an increase of $78,337 over a similar period in 1940.

Police verified the fact that passing automobiles seemed to infuriate Corona.

Files Personal Injury Suit As Crash Aftermath

A $3,910 personal injury suit had been filed in Richland county common pleas court today by C. E. Strader of Seville for his minor son, Clarence, who figured in a traffic accident last April 12 on U. S. route 42 in South Boulevards.

The action is against Miss Glenna Jean Campbell, Lexington, driver of one of the two cars involved in the collision.

The plaintiff's petition states that Miss Campbell negligently drove her car across the highway in front of the car in which the Strader youth was riding, causing the collision.

The boy's father states further in his action that the youth suffered head and face injuries and cuts and bruises on his body. The facial injuries will leave permanent scars, he contends. Atty. Robert Brenner of Wooster represents Strader.

WRITES, PRINTS, PUBLISHES BOOK

CLEVELAND—(U.P.)—Mrs. Rosalee R. Phillips, who believes that the way to get a thing done is to do it herself, has published a book — which she edited, set in type, printed and sold herself.

Much of the poetry which is in the volume, "Night Lights" also was written by the 21-year-old woman.

The printing was done on an old hand press in the basement of the Phillips home. Even the cover picture—a colored photograph of Cleveland's terminal tower—was taken, developed and printed by the young publisher.

When the job was finished the woman, acting as her own sales-manager, arranged with downtown bookstores to sell the volume.

STOCK MARKET TOP-NOTCHERS SHAKEN DOWN

Declines of Fractions and More Recorded; Taxes Hit Steel Earnings.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market leaders were shaken down fractions today with a few suffering wider declines.

Backward were Republic Steel, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, J. I. Case, and DuPont.

Resistant were Montgomery Ward, American Telephone and Westinghouse.

Stressing the growing tax burden to market analysts was the Bethlehem Steel statement made public after yesterday's close. Due to exceptionally heavy provisions for taxes, the company's second quarter net dropped from $3.07 a share in the like 1940 period to $1.34. In the preceding 1941 quarter $2.95 was shown.

Some comfort was derived from the Dun & Bradstreet survey disclosing this week's retail spending throughout the nation continued at unusually high levels for this time of year.
